THIS REPORT ON THE STUDY OF "NEGLECTED" LANGUAGES IN UNITED STATES COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES IN 1962-63 SHOWED THAT THE NEGLECT WAS DIMINISHING WITH ENROLLMENTS OF ABOUT 17,000 STUDENTS IN FOREIGN LANGUAGE CLASSES, EXCLUDING THE "BIG FIVE" (FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, RUSSIAN, AND SPANISH). IN 168 COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES IN THE UNITED STATES, 68 NEGLECTED FOREIGN LANGUAGES WERE BEING TAGUHT IN 270 DEPARTMENTS BY OVER 1,000 TEACHERS TO MORE THAN 11,000 STUDENTS (A FIGURE REACHED BY ESTIMATING THAT EACH STUDENT IS ENROLLED IN ABOUT 1 1/2 COURSES IN THE LANGUAGE). THE FIVE "NEGLECTED" LANGUAGES IN WHICH THE LARGEST ENROLLMENTS WERE REPORTED ARE HEBREW, JAPANESE, CHINESE, PORTUGUESE, AND NORWEGIAN. RELATED INFORMATION MAY BE FOUND IN ED 010 469. (LP)

The research reported here was performed pursuant to Contract No. OE 2-14-032 with the U. S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

FOREWORD

This report on the study of neglected languages in United States colleges and universities in 1962-63 shows that the neglect is diminishing, with enrollments of some 17,000 in foreign-language classes excluding the "big five": French, German, Italian, Russian, and Spanish. In 168 colleges and universities in the United States, 68 "neglected" foreign languages are being taught in 270 departments by over a thousand teachers to more than eleven thousand students, a figure we reach by estimating that each student is enrolled in about one and a half courses in the language. The five languages in which the largest enrollments were reported are Hebrew, Japanese, Chinese, Portuguese, and Norwegian.

The degree of our success in getting responses to enquiries was perfect from registrars, almost perfect from department chairmen, better than 75% from teachers, but only 53% from students, despite our vigorous efforts and repeated pleas. The lack of completeness in the responses from teachers and students affects the reliability of the biographical and professional data but not of the complete data on enrollments, which were obtained from registrars and department chairmen.

Because of previous (1960-61 and 1961-62) surveys of college and university enrollments in all foreign languages, we may compare percentages of increase: 16.6% from fall 1960 to fall 1961, levelling off somewhat to 8.7% from fall 1961 to fall 1962. Increases in graduate enrollments are much higher, 41.0% from 1960 to 1961 and 24.5% from 1961 to 1962. The strength of this level is due in part to NDEA financial support (30.3% of all graduate students who returned forms held NDEA fellowships).

An examination of the linguistic and academic levels of the students who returned forms shows that though 70% of the undergraduates are only at the first-year course in a neglected language, 46.1% of these undergraduates (and 33.6% of the total body of students) are freshmen who will have the opportunity, as upper-classmen and graduate students, to continue their language study to an advanced level.

Of the undergraduate students reporting, 12.4% (528) said that they were either bilingual since childhood or that their native language was not English. For graduate students the corresponding figure was 17.1% (306). Foreign nationals were 4% (173) of the undergraduates and 8.4% (150) of the graduate students.

Of the 775 teachers who returned forms, 505 (65.1%) rate their speaking ability in the languages they teach as native or near native. A slightly greater number, 512 (66.1%), report that they can lecture in the language.

Students of neglected languages were asked about their plans for use of their special knowledge. The largest group of graduate students (396, or 22.2%) planned to do writing and research, the next largest groups planned to enter college teaching (374, or 20.9%) or teaching in general (269, or 15.0%). It is a reasonable assumption that the careers of most students in all three of these groups (over a thousand graduate students) will have some college or university connection, and they should notably strengthen the resources for teaching neglected languages in the United States in the near future.

The compilation of statistical data in any field depends on the cooperation of a great many people. In the case of the neglected languages the difficulties (and our need for help and our gratitude) were increased by our ignorance of the languages involved, by inconsistencies in classification and spelling of names of languages and people, and by the newness of many of the programs. We here express our deep thanks to the registrars, department chairmen, teachers, and students of neglected languages for their part in this pioneer survey. Special thanks go to Donald F. Bigelow, A. Bruce Gaarder, and Bronson Price of the U. S. Office of Education for their interest and guidance in the planning of the survey. And to the Research staff that devised the forms, and the initial and follow-up mailings, the tabulation, the cross-checking, and the typing, our thanks for a meticulous performance of an exhausting task: Nancy Lian, Eileen Marron, James Marron, Carol Sherman, Judy Sherman, and Loran Thompson. In positions of greater involvement and responsibility were James Simms and Hannelore Tierney, and, above all, the Director of Research, John T. Harmon, whose appreciation of the need for accurate detail was matched by his broad grasp of the implications of the whole project. His capacity to see both the trees and the forest with equal clarity has much to do with the success of this survey.

MANPOWER IN THE NEGLECTED LANGUAGES

PART I: TEXT AND TABLES

INTRODUCTION

Surveys made by the Modern Language Association each year from 1958 to 1961 ascertained the enrollments in the "neglected" modern foreign languages, as well as those in French, German, Italian, Russian, and Spanish.

In the judgment of the U. S. Office of Education, under the auspices of which such surveys had been completed, enrollment data alone did not answer many questions commonly asked within the government, by the language teaching profession, and by the general public. To this end, the Commissioner's Advisory Committee to Title VI of the National Defense Education Act recommended the establishment of a roster of teachers and students to be known as the "Manpower Roster for the Neglected Modern Foreign Languages."

In August 1962 the Modern Language Association, under contract with the U. S. Office of Education, began a survey of all institutions of higher learning, to determine the institutions which planned to begin or continue offering instruction.

The first questionnaires were sent to registrars. From the answers to these forms, a master list of department chairmen was compiled. Each chairman received a form which asked for the enrollments, program information, and the names of all teachers of neglected languages in his department. Upon receipt of these names, forms were sent to each teacher requesting biographical data, information on proficiencies in neglected languages, and details of courses taught at that time, including numbers of students in each course. Finally, forms were sent to each teacher for all students in his courses in neglected languages. This form requested biographical data, details on number of courses studied, career plans that involved the use of the language, and the names of scholarships held.

Although the survey was intended to cover the fall semester of 1962, time schedules did not allow the return of forms from students until the spring semester.

This report gives information on 168 universities and colleges (both two-year and four-year) which taught 68 neglected languages and 7 categories of linguistics and area studies in Fall 1962. Data were received from 270 department chairmen, 775 teachers, and 6032 students. No information was received from chairmen, teachers, or students in the following departments which were reported to be teaching neglected languages in Fall 1961: Hebrew (Univ. of Arizona, Univ. of Miami, Univ. of Kansas City, Emerson College and Seattle Univ.); Portuguese (Louisiana State Univ. and Chestnut Hill College); and Polish, Slovak, and Lithuanian (St. Charles Borromeo Seminary).

Cornell Univ. supplied basic enrollment data, but no information was obtained from teachers or students of Burmese, Chinese, Czech, Dutch, Hindi, Indonesian, Japanese, Javanese, Quechua, Portuguese, Serbo-Croatian, Singhalese, Thai, or Vietnamese.

ENROLLMENTS

Enrollments in neglected languages reported by department chairmen in Fall 1962 totalled 17,072, as compared with 15,707 for the same institutional group in Fall 1961(1), an increase of 8.7 per cent. The undergraduate enrollment in Fall 1962 was 12,445 (72.8% of the total), the graduate enrollment was 3,644 (21.4%), and the "unclassified" enrollment was 983 (5.8%).

Although it was impossible to determine the exact number of students of neglected languages in Fall 1962, a reasonable estimate of the proportion of students to enrollments is 2 to 3. This estimate is based on work with the survey forms for over a year; specifically, comparisons of the numbers of students reported by teachers with the numbers of enrollments reported by chairmen showed in most cases that such a proportion, though certainly not exact, is close enough to serve as a general rule of thumb. On the basis of this estimate, the number of students of neglected languages in Fall 1962, corresponding to enrollments of 17,072, would be 11,381.

The following chart gives the breakdown of total enrollments by level for 1960, 1961, and 1962 and the per cents of increase at each level for 1961 and 1962:

	1960	1961	Per Cent of Increase	1962	Per Cent of Increase
Undergraduate	10,620	11,941	12.4	12,445	4.2
Graduate	2,076	2,928	41.0	3,644	24.5
Unclassified(2)	776	838	8.0	983	17.3
Total	13,472(3)	15,707	16.6	17,072	8.7

In both 1961 and 1962, graduate enrollments were increasing at a more rapid pace than those in the other categories. Such increases at the graduate level are undoubtedly due in large measure to the establishment, under the National Defense Education Act, of Language and Area Centers, and to its provision for financial aid through scholarships under Titles IV and VI. Except in the "unclassified" category, per cents of increase in 1962 were smaller than they had been in 1961.

1) The figure 15,707 combines totals given for neglected languages in two MLA surveys: Table VI of Modern Foreign Language Enrollments in Colleges and Universities, Fall 1961 by John Harmon and Hannelore Tierney and Chart E of Modern Foreign Language Teaching in Junior Colleges, Fall, 1961 by J. Wesley Childers.
2) The breakdown of 1960 and 1961 data has been arranged to comform with that available for 1962: "unclassified" enrollments have been added into the undergraduate figure, except for enrollments from the Army Language School, the only institution on the 1962 list with enrollments in the "unclassified" category.
3) The figure 13,472 combines totals given for neglected languages in table VI of Modern Foreign Language Enrollments in Four-Year Colleges and Universities, Fall 1960 by Mara Vamos, et al., and Table 7 of Modern Foreign Language Teaching in Junior College, Fall 1959, Fall 1960 by J. Wesley Childers and Barbara B. Bell.

Table E 1 gives total enrollments reported in neglected languages in Fall 1961 and in Fall 1962. Per cents of change have been calculated for all languages in which enrollments numbered more than 50 in either of the two years compared.

About a third of the totals for neglected languages each year have been enrollments in modern Hebrew, concentrated in a few schools in which Hebrew is either a required or predominanted part of the curriculum. This means that the figures to be distributed amont the many other languages are actually fewer than the totals may suggest. About half the languages listed in Table E 1 are taught at only one or two institutions and to extremely small classes of students.

After Hebrew, Japanese had the largest 1962 enrollment (2,368) followed by Chinese (2,165) and Portuguese (1,802). Chinese had had the largest enrollment after Hebrew in 1961. Norwegian, Polish, Arabic, and Swedish each had enrollments of over 500, and Korean, Hindi, Czech, Vietnamese, Persian, Dutch, Danish, Turkish, Greek, Ukrainian, and Serbo-Croatian each had more than 100 enrollments. Most of the other languages had enrollments well below 100.

Fifteen languages for which enrollments were reported in 1961 had no enrollments reported in 1962: Bantu, Creole (African), Egyptian, Ewe, Gafat, Geez, Gurage, Harari, Igbo (Ibo), Ilocano, Khalka, Kpelle, Mayan, Nepah, and Tigrinya. Twelve languages, which may have been offered, but not taught, in 1961, were reported as having enrollments in Fall 1962: Alaskan-Athapaskan, Hausa, Javanese, Krio, Lettish, Malayalam, Netherlandic, Scandinavian, Singhalese, Tagalog, Tswana, and Zulu. The African languages showed the greatest fluctuation in offerings. Apparently, persons are available to teach many of the African languages which were not taught in Fall 1962 for lack of enrollment.

The largest per cent of increase in enrollments (856.3) was in Vietnamese, due to enrollments at the Army Language School. Of the other language for which per cents of change are given on Table E 1, 4 had increases of more than 50 per cent (Swahili, Ukrainian, Persian, and Hawaiian), 4 were in the 25-50 per cent range (Danish, Portuguese, Armenian, and Swedish), and 9 increased less than 25 per cent (Hungarian, Turkish, Norwegian, Japanese, Hebrew, Hindi, Dutch, Indonesian, and Polish). Eight languages showed decreases in enrollments: Arabic, Korean, Chinese, Slovak, Czech, Thai, Serbo-Croatian, and Greek. Of these, Chinese and Greek showed losses of more than 100. Figures for 1962 on Greek are much more reliable than those in previous years, because of a vigorous attempt to exclude Ancient Greek from the reporting.

Table E 2 gives a breakdown of all enrollments by year of study. Under each year of study, a column is given for undergraduate and graduate. In this table, "unclassified" enrollments from Army Language School have arbitrarily been included under 1st-year language courses at the graduate level. Any other enrollments for which a year-breakdown was not available were included under 1st-year language courses at the appropriate level, graduate or undergraduate.

The following chart gives national data on enrollments by year of study of neglected languages, with separate data for "unclassified" enrollments:

	Total	Per Cent	Under-graduate	Per Cent	Graduate	Per Cent
1st-year language	10,344	60.5	8,730	70.1	1,614	34.9
unclassified	983	5.8			983	21.2
2nd-year language	2,592	15.2	2,025	16.3	567	12.2
3rd-year language	1,079	6.3	662	5.3	417	9.0
4th-year language	542	3.2	177	1.4	365	7.9
Literature	1,532	9.0	851	6.9	681	14.8
Totals	17,072	100.0	12,445	100.0	4,627	100.0

Table E 3 provides a breakdown of total enrollment in neglected languages by class year. Graduate enrollment is divided according to first-year-graduate enrollments and all other graduate enrollments. In the first-year-graduate column, Army Language School enrollments have been included arbitrarily. The following chart gives national figures of enrollments by class or year, with per cents of total enrollment (17,072) and of undergraduate enrollment (12,445) or graduate enrollment (4,627). A separate category is given for "unclassified" enrollments:

	Under-graduate	Per Cent of 17,072	Per Cent of 12,445	Graduate	Per Cent of 17,072	Per Cent of 4,627
Freshman	5,739	33.6	46.1
Sophomore	2,636	15.4	21.1
Junior	1,754	10.3	14.1
Senior	2,316	13.5	18.7
1st-year Graduate				1,677	9.9	36.2
Unclassified				983	5.8	21.2
Other Graduate				1,967	11.5	42.6
Totals	12,445	72.8	100.0	4,627	27.2(4)	100.0

4) 27.2 per cent combines the per cent of all graduate enrollments (21.4) and the per cent of "unclassified" enrollments (5.8).

TEACHERS

Of the 1,021 persons reported by chairmen to be teaching neglected languages in Fall 1962, 775 (75.9%) returned forms on which they gave information on their academic backgrounds, linguistic proficiencies, and courses they were teaching at that time. Information from these teachers given on Tables T 1 through T 4(5). The first column on each table lists the languages taught.

Table T 1 gives data on age and position in college and university language departments. The largest group of the 775 teachers are the 257 between 30 and 40 (33.2%), followed by the 199 between 40 and 50 (25.6%), the 122 between 50 and 60 (15.8%), and the 119 between 20 and 30 (15.3%). The 49 teachers over 60 accounted for 6.3 per cent and 3.8 per cent (29) did not give this information.

The largest group by academic rank was that of Professor (146,or 18.8%), followed by Assistant Professor and Instructor (each 135, or 17.4%), Lecturer (106, or 13.7%), Associate Professor (94, or 12.1%), Teaching Assistant or Fellow (92, or 11.9%), Native Informant (21, or 2.7%), Associate (19, or 2.5%), Preceptor(a title reported only from persons at Columbia University, 7, or .9%), Teacher Unspecified (5, or .6%), and Military Rank (2, or .3%). Thirteen teachers (1.7%) did not give their rank.

Table T 2 presents data on Proficiency in neglected languages and the sources of the knowledge that they have about countries in which such languages are spoken.

Teachers were asked to indicate their abilities in all modern foreign languages on the basis of a proficiency code. Information from this code was tabulated for each teacher only for the language(s) he was teaching in Fall 1962. (Information on other languages in which proficiencies were indicated appears on Table T 4.) The code numbers 0, 1, and 2, relating to speaking ability, were mutually exclusive, and only one of the three was tabulated for each teacher. Persons who indicated more than one of these three were tabulated for the highest proficiency indicated. Code numbers 3 and 4, relating to reading ability, were also mutually exclusive, and persons who indicated both were counted under 3 only. The code numbers 5, 6, 7, and 8 were not mutually exclusive, and each was counted wherever it was indicated. The chart below gives the breakdown of numbers of persons indicating self-evaluated proficiencies in the languages taught by them in Fall 1962, and the per cents of the total number of teachers:

Code	No. of teachers indicating proficiency	Per Cent of 775	No Indication given by:	Per Cent of 775
0 Native or near-native command	505	65.1
1 Fluent though obviously non-native in speaking	157	20.3
2 Adequate for general conversation	71	9.1
Total indicating speaking proficiency	733		42	5.5
3 Read difficult material easily	621	80.1
4 Reading knowledge adequate for research	74	9.5
Total indicating reading proficiency	695		80	10.4

5) In PARTS IV and V of the present report, names of all teachers reported by chairmen are given.

Code	No. of teachers indicating proficiency	Per Cent of 775	No indication given by:	Per Cent of 775
5 Can lecture in language	512	66.1	263	33.9
6 Translator or interpreter	400	51.6	375	48.4
7 Have made linguistics studies or analyses	350	45.1	425	54.9
8 Have taught language	671	86.6	104	13.4

It is assumed that those who did not indicate that they had taught the language interpreted code 8 to mean "have taught previously to the current academic year."

Table T 2 also gives data on teachers who were natives of foreign countries, and on the sources of knowledge gained about foreign countries by American-born teachers. Of the 775 teachers who supplied information, 342 (44.2%) were foreign-born native speakers of the language they were teaching in Fall 1962. The largest number of American-born teachers were the 81 (10.5% of the total) who had studied in the country. Other sources of knowledge were foreign residence (74, or 9.5%), extensive travel in the country (37, or 4.7%), extensive research (12, or 1.5%), teaching in the country (10, or 1.3%), and duty with the Foreign Service (3 or .4%).

Table T 3 specifies the number of persons who had received bachelor's, master's and Ph. D degrees in languages, linguistics, and other subjects. The heading "Language" on this table (in each degree category) indicates numbers of persons who had earned degrees in the language which they were teaching in Fall 1962.

In many cases, no data on degrees held were indicated. Also, many persons who indicated that they held Ph. D.'s gave no indication of their majors leading to bachelor's or master's degrees.

A total of 392 teachers (or 50.5% of the total 775) stated that they held Ph. D's; 482 (or 62.1%) stated that they held Master's degrees and 562 (or 72.5%) stated that they had Bachelor's degrees.

The chart below gives the number of teachers with bachelor's, master's, and Ph. D. degrees in language, literature, and "Other" as well as the number who did not provide information. Also the per cents are given of the total responding in each degree category and of the total number of teachers on whom data were available:

A total of 202 held Ph. D's, 172 held master's degrees and 154 held bachelor's degrees in the language which they were teaching. In linguistics, 69 held Ph. D's, 62 held master's and 22 held bachelor's degrees.

Table T 4 shows languages other than the language of instruction in which the teachers indicated proficiencies. In this tabulation, a teacher was counted once for each language in which he indicated a proficiency.

More teachers had proficiency in French (474) than in any other of the commonly taught modern foreign languages. German (385) was a close second, followed by Spanish (188), Italian (133), and Russian (129).

Teachers of neglected languages in Fall 1962 indicated proficiency in a total of 87 non-European languages.

STUDENTS

Forms were received from 6,032 students of 67 neglected languages (including Turkic Linguistics) enrolled in courses in Spring 1963. Graduate students in 65 languages (66, if Cantonese is counted separately) responded to the questionnaire; undergraduate students in 45 languages (two of which, Eskimo and Scandinavian, were not reported by graduates) responded. Of the 67 languages in which study was reported in Spring 1963, 11 had no enrollments reported in them in Fall 1962 (Byelorussian, Igbo, Indonesian Bahasa, Kabyle, Kannada, KiKongo, Luganda, Moroccan Arabic, Shona, Tamazight, and Uighur.

In the present report, listings of enrollments (Tables E 1 through E 3) and listings of students (Tables U 1 through U 5 and G 1 through G 5) each have 56 languages in common. Of the 75 languages and categories of linguistics for which enrollments were reported in Fall 1962 (pages 5, 6, & 7), 19 are missing from the listings referring to student study in Spring 1963 (Alaskan-Athapaskan, Berber Languages, Bulgarian, Estonian, Javanese, Krio, Lettish, Netherlandic, Samoan, Singhalese, Slovene, Tagalog, and Zulu). It is not to be concluded that there was no study of these languages in the spring semester, but rather that students did not receive, or did not return the forms.

Of the 6,032 students who returned forms in Spring 1963, 1,784 (29.6%) were graduate students; 4,248 (70.4%) were undergraduates. The per cents of graduate and undergraduate categories returning questionnaires correspond closely to the proportion of enrollments (graduate,21.4%; undergraduate, 72.8%; unclassified, 5.8%) reported by department chairmen.

In both categories, students in fewer than 10 languages accounted for more than three-fourths of all forms received. Among the undergraduates, students of Japanese (975), Portuguese (627), Chinese (535), Norwegian (484), Hebrew (356), Swedish (272), Polish (193), Arabic (184), and Dutch (111) returned 88.0% of all forms on file.

Among the graduates, students of Chinese (356), Portuguese (283), Japanese (275), Arabic (163), Hindi (68), Polish (62), Swedish (61), and Hebrew (56) returned 78.3% of all forms on file.

Tables U 1 through U 4 present the data reported by the 4,248 undergraduates in 45 languages; and tables G 1 through G 4 present data reported by the 1,784 graduates in 65 languages. The first column on each table lists the languages studied. Tables U 1 and G 1 give the total number of students, numbers of students by age categories and by college class (or by year of graduate study), the number holding scholarships, the number of foreign citizens, and the number who reported that they were bilingual (or that English was not their native language).

By age, the largest group of undergraduates were those between 20 and 25 (47.4%) and second largest were those under 20 (43.4%). Among graduates, the largest group were in the age range 25 - 40 (56.4%), followed by the group under 25 (30.8%). Of the graduates, 35 (2.0%) did not give their age; 47 undergraduates (1.2%) did not do so.

Freshman and sophomores accounted for more than half (26.7% and 27.3% respectively) the total number of undergraduates who answered the questionnaire. And first- and second-year graduates also accounted for more than half the total number of graduates replying (29.9% and 25.2%, respectively).

Among the 4,248 undergraduates, 28 (0.6%) were holders of National Defense Education Act Fellowships, whereas among the graduates, 541 (30.3%) held NDEA Fellowships. Other types of scholarships(commonly those awarded by colleges and universities)were held by 692 undergraduates (16.2%) and 283 graduates (15.8%).

Bilingual since childhood or not native speakers of English were 528 undergraduates (12.4%) and 306 graduate students (17.1%). Four per cent (173) of the undergraduates and 8.4 per cent (150) of the graduates were citizens of a foreign country.

Tables U 2 and G 2 show the numbers of courses taken by students of each language and how many students of each language had had courses in area studies and linguistics. Among both undergraduates and graduates, more than half had taken fewer than three courses (3193, or 75.1% of the undergraduates; 915, or 51.2% of the graduates). Those having taken three to five courses numbered 827 (19.5%) undergraduates, 547 (30.7%) graduates; six to ten courses, 169 (4.0%) undergraduates 260 (14.6%) graduates; more than ten courses, 11 (0.2%) undergraduates, 30 (1.7%) graduates. In all the tabulations of numbers of courses, an intensive (double-credit) course was counted as two courses.

Linguistics courses were taken by 304 (7.1%) of the undergraduates and by 485 (27.1%) of the graduates; area studies courses, by 272 (6.4%) of the undergraduate and by 311 (17.4%) of the graduates.

One of the main purposes of the survey was to determine why students were learning each language. The following chart shows the breakdown of graduate and undergraduate students according to their reasons for study (Tables U 3 and G 3 give such information in full):

The largest number of graduate students in a single category are those planning to write and do research, followed closely by those planning to go into college teaching. It is likely that many of the graduates who did not specify the type of teaching they would enter will become college teachers; further, it is likely that many of those who intend to do research or to write will also be associated with a college or university and do some teaching. A rough total of 700 graduate students enrolled in 1962-63,on whom information was available, will be teaching neglected languages within the next few years. Even if only a majority of the 374 who stated their intention to become college teachers actually do teach in colleges and universities in the future, these persons would increase the number engaged in teaching in 1962-63 by around 35 per cent.

More than 30 per cent of all the undergraduates surveyed were taking neglected languages for reasons of travel or general cultural interest in foreign countries. The number of undergraduates studying an ancestral language was significantly higher than the graduates in the same category.

Among the careers listed by students in the "Other" category above were Library Science, Law, Translation, International Law, Elementary School Teaching, Journalism, Airline Stewardess, Nurse, Doctor, Interpreter, and Military Officer.

Tables U 4 and G 4 show the other languages previously studied by students of neglected languages in 1962-63. In the tabulation of these languages, a student was counted once for every language he had studied for at least one year. Since many persons had studied more than one language, they appear in the tabulations of each applicable language.

Among both undergraduates and graduates, more persons had studied French than any other of the commonly studied modern foreign languages, and fewer had studied Italian than any other. German ranked second on the graduate level, followed closely by Spanish; though on the undergraduate level, Spanish was far ahead of German. At both levels, Russian was in fourth place.

A total of 64 non-European languages had been studied for at least a year by undergraduates, and 107 by graduates.

The information on other languages previously studied is mainly significant in terms of the language of present study. For instance, it is more important to know that 94 of the undergraduate students of Arabic also have studied French, and that 88 graduate students in Chinese also have studied Japanese, than it is to know total figures on students who have previously studied Japanese and French.

Tables U 5 and G 5 give numbers of students studying more than one language with other appropriate data such as numbers of courses for such students. Such persons were tabulated only once, and are not included in the figure 6,032 (total number of students on whom data are available). All persons represented by the figures in tables U 5 and G 5 are included in the data on the previous tables referring to undergraduates and graduates (U 1 through U 4 and G 1 through G 4).

Languages for which data are given only on tables showing students of two languages are KiKongo (Table U 5) and Amharic, Byelorussian, Cantonese, Kurdish, Lithuanian, Marathi, Tswana and Uighur (Table G 5).

A SURVEY OF THE TEACHING OF NEGLECTED MODERN FOREIGN LANGUAGES IN COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES, FALL 1962

Conducted under contract with

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE, Office of Education

TO DEPARTMENT CHAIRMEN:

The Modern Language Association, under contract with the U.S. Office of Education, is making a detailed survey of the study of all modern foreign languages except the five most commonly taught in the United States (French, German, Italian, Russian, Spanish). We need to know much more than the total enrollments in the neglected languages, in order to assess the degree to which higher education is meeting the national need and the demand for future teachers of these languages.

We ask you, as a teacher of one or more of these languages, to give us the information below, assuring you in advance of our gratitude for your help.

Sincerely yours,

John T. Harmon

[2] If language study and literature are taught in a single course, list enrollments in such a course in the appropriate language column.

3. Describe the content of literature courses which are taught in the foreign language:

4. If any courses are intensive (double-credit), list them here:

5. If your department uses a language laboratory, list each course in which it is used and indicate for each course the number of required laboratory hours per week·

Course	No. of Lab. hours per week

6. If any courses are part of an area program, list them here:

7. List all teachers of this language in your department, with the names of the courses that they teach. If you use native informants*, include them and star their names:

Name	Course

8. If you plan to introduce additional courses in this language in 1962-63, give details:

9. If you know of new courses in languages not now offered at your institution, give us the names of the languages and the names of the persons to whom we may write for further information:

TO ALL TEACHERS OF NEGLECTED LANGUAGES:

We ask for your participation in a survey that we are making, authorized by the National Defense Education Act, and under contract with the U.S. Office of Education, of the study of neglected modern foreign languages, here defined as all those except French, German, Italian, Russian, and Spanish. Your cooperation will help to ensure complete information on a subject of vital concern to our profession and to our nation.

Sincerely yours,

A SURVEY OF THE STUDY OF NEGLECTED MODERN FOREIGN LANGUAGES IN COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES, FALL 1962

Conducted under contract with

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE, Office of Education

TO STUDENTS OF NEGLECTED LANGUAGES:

Your study of a neglected language is helping to meet a crucial need for competence in such languages in scholarship, in teaching, and in international affairs. In order to learn as much as possible about the manpower supply in this field, we ask you to answer the following questions and return the form to your instructor. Please answer a separate questionnaire for each neglected language (here defined as any modern language except French, German, Italian, Russian, or Spanish) that you are now studying. Do not include information concerning ancient languages. (Example: A person studying Chinese and Korean is requested to fill in two linguistic information sections of the questionnaire. A person studying Polish, French, and Russian is requested to fill in only one linguistic information section, for Polish.)

We assure you in advance of our gratitude for your help.

Sincerely yours,

John T. Harmon

MANPOWER IN THE NEGLECTED LANGUAGES, FALL 1962

PART IV

A ROSTER OF TEACHERS BY LANGUAGE

The research reported here was performed pursuant to Contract No. OE 2-14-032 with the U. S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

ARRANGEMENT OF THE ROSTER OF TEACHERS BY LANGUAGE

Languages appear in alphabetical order.

Names of teachers appear in alphabetical order.

The symbol + appearing before a name indicates that the person is a teacher of more than one neglected language, or that he teaches at more than one institution. References are provided for the applicable languages or institutions for each person so designated.

The symbol * appearing before a name indicates that the person was reported by a department chairman to be teaching a neglected language, but that a rosted form was not received from him.

Following each name are references of rank, of language(s) and of institution.

The following code is used to indicate rank:

Prof = Professor
Assoc = Associate Professor
Asst = Assistant Professor
Inst = Instructor
Lect = Lecturer
Associate = Research or Teaching Associate
Preceptor = Junior Instructor
TF = Teaching Fellow
TA = Teaching Assistant
Tchr = Teacher (no other rank given)
Inf = Native Informant
Milit = Military personnel

The teacher's institution is indicated by the code in the last column, which is explained by the INSTITUTION ABBREVIATIONS on pp. ii and iii.

An additional language taught by the teacher follows the name of his institution. The code is explained by the LANGUAGE ABBREVIATIONS on p. iv.

THE MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA
4 WASHINGTON PLACE
NEW YORK 3, N. Y.

MANPOWER IN THE NEGLECTED LANGUAGES, FALL 1962

PART V

AN ALPHABETICAL ROSTER OF TEACHERS

The research reported here was performed pursuant to Contract No. OE 2-14-032 with the U. S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

ARRANGEMENT OF THE ALPHABETICAL ROSTER OF TEACHERS

Names of teachers appear in alphabetical order.

The symbol + appearing before a name indicates that the person is a teacher of more than one neglected language, or that he teaches at more than one institution. References are provided for the applicable language or institution for each person so designated.

The symbol * appearing before a name indicates that the person was reported by a department chairman to be teaching a neglected language, but that a roster form was not received from him.

Following each name are references of rank, of language(s) and of institution.

The following code is used to indicate rank:

Prof	=	Professor
Assoc	=	Associate Professor
Asst	=	Assistant Professor
Inst	=	Instructor
Lect	=	Lecturer
Associate	=	Research or Teaching Associate
Preceptor	=	Junior Instructor
TF	=	Teaching Fellow
TA	=	Teaching Assistant
Tchr	=	Teacher (no other rank given)
Inf	=	Native Informant
Milit	=	Military personnel

The teacher's language is indicated by the code in the third column, which is explained by the LANGUAGE ABBREVIATIONS on p. iv.

The teacher's institution is indicated by the code in the last column, which is explained by the INSTITUTION ABBREVIATIONS on pp. ii and iii.

THE MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA
4 WASHINGTON PLACE
NEW YORK 3, N. Y.

MANPOWER IN THE NEGLECTED LANGUAGES, FALL 1962

PART VI

A ROSTER OF STUDENTS BY LANGUAGE

The research reported here was performed pursuant to Contract No. OE 2-14-032 with the U. S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

ARRANGEMENT OF THE ROSTER OF STUDENTS BY LANGUAGE

Languages appear in alphabetical order.

Students of each language appear in alphabetical order.

> The symbol + appearing before a name indicates that the person is a student of more than one neglected language. Cross references are provided for the applicable languages for each person so designated.

Following each name are references of year and of institution.

> The numbers 63, 64, 65, etc., indicate that the person so designated is an undergraduate whose year of graduation is 1963, 1964, 1965, etc.
> The ordinal numbers 1st, 2nd, 3rd, etc., indicate that the person so designated is a graduate student in the first, second, third, etc., year of graduate study.
> The symbol -- in the year column means that the student did not indicate a year of graduation; or that he was an unclassified student (special student, etc.).

The student's institution is indicated by the code in the last column, which is explained by the INSTITUTION ABBREVIATIONS on pp. ii and iii.

THE MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA
4 WASHINGTON PLACE
NEW YORK 3, N. Y.

MANPOWER IN THE NEGLECTED LANGUAGES, FALL 1962

PART VII

AN ALPHABETICAL ROSTER OF STUDENTS

The research reported here was performed pursuant to Contract No. OE 2-14-032 with the U. S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

ARRANGEMENT OF THE ALPHABETICAL ROSTER OF STUDENTS

Names of students appear in alphabetical order according to the first letter of the last name.

The symbol + appearing before a name indicates that the person is a student of more than one neglected language. References are provided for the applicable languages for each person so designated.

Following each name are references of year, of language(s) and of institution.

The numbers 63, 64, 65, etc., indicate that the person so designated is an undergraduate whose year of graduation is 1963, 1964, 1965, etc.

The ordinal numbers 1st, 2nd, 3rd, etc., indicate that the person so designated is a graduate student in the first, second, third, etc., year of graduate study.

The symbol -- in the year column means that the student did not indicate a year of graduation; or that he was an unclassified student (special student, etc.).

The student's language is indicated by the code in the third column, which is explained by the LANGUAGE ABBREVIATIONS on p. iv.

The student's institution is indicated by the code in the last column, which is explained by the INSTITUTION ABBREVIATIONS on pp. ii and iii.

TEXTBOOKS

The research reported here was performed pursuant to Contract No. OE 2-14-032 with the U. S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

LISTINGS OF TEXTBOOKS

Information on textbooks used in courses in neglected language, Fall 1962, was provided by the teachers of these languages who participated in the survey. Not all teachers answered the form; and the data on texts were not always complete. The listing here is therefore only partial.

Arrangement is by author, text, publisher, and number of institutions using the text. Where no entry is made for author or publisher, such data were not made available to the Modern Language Association.

MANPOWER IN THE NEGLECTED LANGUAGES

PART IX

SUMMER SCHOOL, 1963

The research reported here was performed pursuant to Contract No. OE 2-14-032 with the U. S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

HIGHLIGHTS -- SUMMER 1963

1. A total enrollment of 2,318 was estimated by department chairmen for 26 neglected languages in which instruction was given in Summer 1963 at 42 institutions, about half of which were those which had Language and Area Centers sponsored by the NDEA.

2. On the basis of calculations made from incomplete breakdowns, graduate and undergraduate enrollments were about equal. Since this is the first year when data on summer school were gathered, no per cents of change from previous years are available.

3. Nearly 300 teachers were reported by the chairmen to be teaching in summer school. The largest numbers of teachers were in Chinese, Japanese, Hebrew and Portuguese. A majority of those teaching in summer school had also been teaching in regular session, though in many instances not at the same institution.

4. Information gained for the first time on 91 teachers in summer school brings the number of neglected-language teachers on whom Roster Forms are available to 866. Information gained for the first time on students in summer school brings the number of students on whom Roster Forms are available to 7,052.

5. Of the total number of students who returned summer-session roster forms, about one-fourth had been studying also in regular session. Because of the intensive programs in summer school, many of these students were able to advance their language study by an entire year.

6. Among the institutions included in this report, two were conducting Summer Institutes for Secondary School Teachers, Yeshiva in Hebrew, and Seton Hall in Chinese and Japanese.

   Inadvertently, an additional NDEA Institute for 20 Secondary School Teachers of Chinese at San Francisco State College was omitted from this report. No data are included for Enrollments, Teachers, or Students. We regret the error, which came to our attention too late for adjustment of the data prepared for this report.

SUMMER SCHOOL, 1963

INTRODUCTION

The present report on Neglected Languages in Summer School 1963 presents the first data ever gathered by the Modern Language Association on foreign language study in a summer session. The same plan of operation was used in gathering summer school data as that used for regular session information. Because of the brevity of the session (many schools had only 6 weeks), department chairmen were requested in April to indicate estimated enrollments and names of summer school teachers. Forms for teachers and students were mailed in a single batch at the beginning date of each school's session.

The entire pattern of summer-school study of neglected languages was different from that encountered in regular session. First of all, the majority of all enrollments were reported from the twenty-two Language and Area Centers sponsored by the National Defense Education Act in which courses in neglected languages were offered (two other Language and Area Centers, in Spanish and in Russian, were outside the scope of the present report). The twenty-two Centers fostered a great deal of inter-university cooperation which permitted faculties in Far Eastern languages from eleven large Mid-Western Universities, for example, to pool their resources at the University of Michigan, and the Universities of Colorado and of Kansas to concentrate their Russian and Polish faculties at Colorado and their Japanese and Chinese faculties at Kansas. Teachers from many other institutions were located in summer 1963 at a campus different from that of their regular academic affiliation. Students also changed their addresses for the summer. Columbia University, for example, offered not a single language from its mighty list of regular-session Middle and Near Eastern Language offerings, but instead sent interested students to Georgetown. Hebrew and Norwegian, high in regular-session enrollments, were very low in the summer session.

Many of the programs in summer 1963 were intensive full-year programs telescoped into the short term of 6, 8, or 12 weeks. Of the students, about one-fourth of those responding in summer session had been on our regular session listings, an indication that they were accelerating their programs an entire year by attending an intensive summer session.

ENROLLMENTS

Enrollments were reported in 26 languages at 42 institutions, about half of which had Language and Area Centers sponsored by NDEA. The estimated total enrollment was 2,318. Though this figure, strictly speaking, must be considered as "estimated," since most of the figures were submitted before the beginning of classes, it can be considered to be within 10 per cent of the actual total enrollments. Comparisons between estimates and figures received later showed that the estimates were very close to the actual enrollments. One reason for this is that the majority of the enrollments were those at Language and Area Centers which had their class lists completed long before the beginning of the session.

The following listing shows the languages and the enrollments reported in them in summer session: Japanese 661, Chinese 568, Hebrew 307, Portuguese 307, Arabic 95, Hindi 77, Swahili 41, Polish 37, Indonesian 35, Bengali 20, Hawaiian 20, Korean 20, Hausa 19, Serbo-Croatian 19, Norwegian 18, Armenian 12, Yoruba 12, Telugu 11, Urdu 10, Thai 8, Tamil 7, Burmese 4, Scandinavian 4, Twi 4, Kannada 1, and Luganda 1.

The seven Asian languages in which enrollments were reported (Burmese, Chinese, Hawaiian, Indonesian, Japanese, Korean, and Thai) represented 56.7 per cent of the total enrollment. The six Indian languages (Bengali, Hindi, Kannada, Tamil, Telugu, and Urdu) comprised 5.5 per cent of the total; and the 5 sub-Saharan African languages (Hausa, Luganda, Swahili, Twi, and Yoruba) accounted for 3.3 per cent. Other groupings, and their per cent of the total, were (Arabic and Hebrew), 17.3; and European

Of the 2,318 enrollments for which individual language listings are given above, 854 were specified by chairmen according to breakdown by class year. Although the data on these 854 enrollments cannot be considered as fully representative of the total, certain statistics derived from this breakdown give an indication of the general pattern of enrollments in summer session. Of the 854, 443 (51.8%) were undergraduate, 411 (48.2%) were graduate. Of the undergraduates, 69 (15.5%) were Freshmen, 82 (18.5%) Sophomores, 183 (41.3%) Juniors, and 109 (24.7%) Seniors. Of the graduates, 144 (35.0%) were in their first year of graduate study, and 267 (65.0%) were beyond the first year.

For the 854 enrollments, per cents were also calculated for level of language study. By level, 448 (52.4%) were first-year, 148 (17.3%) were second-year, 71 (8.4%) were third-year, and 51 (5.9%) were fourth-year. In addition, 136 (16.0%) were in literature courses. Even though calculated on the incomplete figure of 854 enrollments, these per cents compare roughly with those calculated for regular session (on the basis of more nearly complete information): first-year, 60.5; second-year 15.2; third-year, 6.3; fourth-year, 3.2, literature, 9.0, and unclassified, 5.8. The largest variations of per cents are in first-year courses (proportionately fewer in summer session), fourth-year courses (proportionately more in summer session), and in Literature courses (proportionately more in summer session).

Even though the enrollment breakdowns cannot be specified with exactness, it is probably safe to say that in summer session, undergraduate and graduate enrollments each represented about half the total reported, that Juniors were the largest group of undergraduates, that those past the first year of study were the largest group of graduates, and that a bit more than half the total was accounted for by enrollments at the first-year level of language study.

The two listings which follow give estimated enrollments by institution and by language. Enrollments which were specified after the beginning of the summer session are indicated by an asterisk.

From the listing by institution, it is apparent that most of the enrollments were concentrated in Hawaii, New York, California, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Mexico (Portuguese only), and Illinois.

In addition to those languages for which enrollments are listed, it should be known that though no enrollments were reported for Indonesian Bahasa or for Kikongo, one student in each language responded to the questionnaire.

	TOTAL:	2318

TEACHERS

According to information received from department chairmen, 277 persons were teaching neglected languages in summer session. The names of these teachers are given on the Roster of Teachers by Language and the Alphabetical Roster of Teachers in summer session. The languages and numbers of teachers of each in summer session are: Arabic 11, Armenian 1, Bengali 9, Burmese 2, Chinese 80, Hausa 2, Hawaiian 1, Hebrew 26. Hindi 16, Indonesian 5, Japanese 64, Korean 6, Norwegian 3, Polish 4, Portuguese 23, Serbo-Croatian 3, Swahili 9, Tamil 5, Thai 2, Twi 1, Urdu 4, and Yoruba 3. The total of these figures is 280 instead of 277 because three persons were teaching both Chinese and Japanese and are counted in each language.

A majority of the persons teaching in summer session had also been teaching in regular session (153 out of 280). Of the 127 persons reported to be teaching for the first time in Summer 1963, 91 returned teacher forms. Information on these 91 persons is given on Table ST which follows on page 12. The information on this table corresponds to that which was presented for teachers of regular session in PART I of this report, with columns for such items as Age, Position, Degrees Held, and Proficiency. The first column lists the language taught. The second gives the total number responding in each language.

By age (cols. 3 through 8), the largest groups of these teachers are the 36 (39.5%) between 30 and 40, and the 24 (26.4%) between 20 and 30. Seventeen (18.7%) were between 40 and 50, 7 (7.7%) were between 50 and 60, 1 (1.1%) was over 60, and 6 (6.5%) did not give information on their age.

By academic rank (cols. 9-18), about a third (33, or 36.2%) were Instructors. The next largest group was that of Teaching Associate or Teaching Fellow (19, or 20.9%), followed by 17 Lecturers (18.7%), 5 Assistant Professors (5.5%), 4 Associate Professors (4.4%), 3 Professors (3.3%), 2 in each of the categories Associate and Teacher Unspecified (2.2%), and 1 Preceptor (1.1%). Five persons (5.5%) did not give their rank.

Information on degrees held is given in columns 19-30. A total of 18 (19.8% of 91) held Ph.D.'s, 55 (60.4%) held master's, and 78 (85.7%) held bachelor's degrees. Eight held Ph.D.'s, 22 held master's and 17 held bachelor's degrees in the language they were teaching in summer session. In linguistics 2 held Ph.D.'s., 2 held master's, and 1 held a bachelor's degree. Degrees in other fields, and the numbers of persons who held each:

Bachelor's:	English (14), Economics, Education, and Languages Unspecified (6 in each), History (5), Law, Literature, Philosophy (3 in each), Chemistry, French, Geology, Political Science, Sociology (2 in each), and Classics, Business, Journalism, and Mathematics (1 in each).
Master's:	Education (7), English (4), Economics and Political Science (3 in each), Geology, Library Science, and Sociology (2 in each), and Drama, History, International Relations, Journalism, Languages Unspecified, Philosophy, Religion, and Theology (1 in each).
Ph.D.'s:	Sociology (2), and Education, English, Folklore, Geology, Government, and History (1 in each).

Columns 31 - 39 list information on proficiencies in languages taught. Information from this code was tabulated for each teacher only for the language he was teaching in Summer 1963. The code numbers 0, 1, and 2, relating to speaking ability were mutually exclusive, and only one of the three was tabulated for each teacher. Persons who indicated more than one of these three were tabulated for the highest proficiency indicated. Code numbers 3 and 4, relating to reading ability, were also mutually exclusive, and persons who indicated both were counted under 3 only. The code numbers 5, 6, 7, and 8 were not mutually exclusive and each was counted wherever it was indicated. The chart below gives the breakdown of numbers of persons indicating self-evaluated proficiencies in the languages taught by them in Summer School 1963, and the per cents of the total number who responded.

Code	Number of Teachers indicating proficiency:	Per Cent of 91	No indication given by	Per Cent of 91
0 Native or near-native command	71	78.0
1 Fluent though obviously non-native in speaking	12	13.2
2 Adequate for general conversation	5	5.5
Total indicating speaking proficiency	88		3	3.3
3 Read difficult material easily	77	84.6
4 Reading knowledge adequate for research	8	8.8
Total indicating reading proficiency	85		6	6.6
5 Can lecture in language	70	76.9	21	23.1
6 Translator or interpreter	61	67.0	30	33.0
7 Have made linguistic studies or analyses	38	41.7	53	58.3
8 Have taught language	91	100.0	0	-

An unusually high per cent of the total number of teachers indicated that they had native or near-native command of the language they were teaching. This is corroborated by the figures in column 40, which lists the numbers of persons who were natives of a foreign country (a total of 64, or 70.3%).

Besides the information given on Table ST, several other items were revealed by the questionnaires from teachers in summer school. Proficiencies were indicated by teachers in a total of 33 languages besides their language of instruction. The languages and the number of persons indicating proficiencies in them are: French 48; German 27; Spanish 17; Russian 7; Chinese 6; Italian, Japanese, and Urdu, 5 each; Arabic and Hindi, 4 each; Yiddish 3; Fulani, Hungarian, Persian, Polish, Swedish, Turkish, and Ukrainian, 2 each; and Azerbaijani, Czech, Dutch, Logooli, Laotian, Luganda, Malayalam, Portuguese, Nyakayusa, Runyankore-Rukiga, Runyoro-Rutooro, Swahili, Tagalog, Tiv, and Vietnamese, 1 each. Of the 27 American-born persons who responded during the summer, 13 had lived and studied in countries whose languages they were teaching in summer 1963.

Most of the textbooks used in summer school were the same as those used in regular session, which are listed in PART VIII of the present report. The following texts were reported for the first time in summer session by one institution each:

Language	Author	Title	Publisher
Arabic	Pellat	Introduction to Modern Arabic	Not given
Burmese	Cornyn and Musgrave	Burmese Glossary	American Council of Learned Societies
Hebrew	Weingreen	Hebrew Grammar	Oxford Univ. Press
	Rosen	Textbook of Israeli Hebrew	Univ. of Chicago Press
Japanese	Fujioka and Mirikitani	Elementary Japanese at the College Level	Univ. of Hawaii
Luganda	Kirwan and Gore	Elementary Luganda	Uganda Bookshop

Unpublished materials not previously reported were used by the Univ. of California, Los Angeles in Hausa and Yoruba, by the Univ. of Chicago in Bengali, and by the Univ. of Southern California in Chinese.

ROSTERS OF TEACHERS

Two rosters of teachers are given: 1) by language and 2) by alphabetical order of names.

The symbol + appearing before a name indicates that the person is a teacher of more than one neglected language, or that he teaches at more than one institution. Cross references are provided for each person so designated.

Names which have no asterisk are of persons teaching in summer session only, for whom teacher forms are on file.

The symbol * before a name indicates that the person was reported by a department chairman to be teaching in summer session as well as regular session.

The symbol  before a name indicates that the person was reported by a department chairman to be teaching in summer session only, but that no teacher form is on file.

Following each name are references of rank, of language (on Alphabetical Roster only) and of institution.

The following code is used to indicate rank:

Prof = Professor
Assoc = Associate Professor
Asst = Assistant Professor
Inst = Instructor
Lect = Lecturer
Associate = Research or Teaching Associate

Preceptor = Junior Instructor
TF = Teaching Fellow
TA = Teaching Assistant
Tchr = Teacher (no other rank given)
Inf = Native Informant

The enrollment figure for summer session (2,318) is much closer to the actual number of students than the corresponding total enrollment figure for regular session. Out of 1,351 students who responded in the summer-session survey, only two were studying two languages. The 1,351 students who returned information on themselves represented 58.3 per cent of the total enrollment estimated by chairmen.

Graduate students of 27 languages and undergraduate students of 19 languages responded to the questionnaires. Bengali, Indonesian-Bahasa, Kannada, KiKongo, Luganda, Tamil, Twi, and Urdu are the 8 languages for which data from graduates only are available. The only language appearing on the listing of students in summer session 1963 that was not on the regular session listing is Twi.

In the present report, listings of enrollments (ENROLLMENTS BY LANGUAGE) and listings of students (Tables SU 1, SU 2, SG 1, and SG 2) each have 25 languages in common. Enrollments were reported in Scandinavian (unspecified), though no students reported Scandinavian as their subject of summer study. Indonesian-Bahasa and KiKongo were reported by students as their language of study, though no enrollments had been given for them.

Table SU 1 gives data on 501 undergraduate students who responded to our survey only in summer session. Table SU 2 presents information on 170 undergraduates who responded for both summer session and regular session. Table SG 1 shows the breakdown of 519 graduate students who responded only for summer session, and Table SG 2 gives information on 161 graduates who answered for both sessions. On all four tables, data are given on total number of students, their age brackets, class year, foreign citizenship, scholarships, number of courses taken, numbers having taken courses in area studies and linguistics, numbers who were bilingual (or for whom English was not the native language), and reasons for study. A total for both Tables SU 1 and SU 2 is given at the bottom of Table SU 2. For each figure the per cent of the total number of undergraduates (671) is given. Similar data for the 680 graduate students are given at the bottom of Table SG2.

Column 1 on all four student tables (SU 1, SU 2, SG 1, SG 2) lists the languages studied, and column 2 on each table lists the total numbers in each. The chart on the following page lists by language the total numbers of students for whom data are given on each table, and the totals for undergraduate, for graduate, and for both levels.

Of the 1,351 students who returned forms in Summer 1963, 671 undergraduates accounted for 49.7 per cent, 680 graduates accounted for 50.3 per cent. These per cents correspond closely to those calculated for the undergraduate and graduate breakdown of enrollments (on the basis of the incomplete breakdown, undergraduate enrollments were 51.8%, and graduate enrollments were 48.2%), though here graduates outnumber undergraduates slightly.

At both levels, students of Japanese, Chinese, and Portuguese returned more than 60.0% of all forms on file.

By age (cols. 3-6), the largest group of undergraduates were the 343 between 20 and 25 (51.1%), followed by the 201 under 20 (29.9%). The largest group of graduates were the 326 between 25 and 40 (47.9%), and the second largest was the group of 247 under 25.

By class year (cols. 7-11), Sophomores and Juniors accounted for almost half (19.3% and 30.2%, respectively) the total number of undergraduates who answered the questionnaire, and first-year and second-year graduates also accounted for almost half (28.2% and 20.1%, respectively). At both levels, more than a fourth of all the students did not give information on their class year.

* Does not include 1 student taking Bengali and Urdu (tabulated under Urdu).
 Does not include 1 student taking Twi and Yoruba (tabulated under Yoruba).

Columns 12, 13, and 14 show the numbers of students who were foreign citizens and the numbers of students who held scholarships. Four per cent of the undergraduates (27) and 5 per cent of the graduates (34) were foreign citizens. Almost a third of the undergraduates and more than half the graduates were holders of scholarships during the summer. NDEA Fellowships were held by 167 graduates (24.5%) and 63 undergraduates (9.4%). Other types of scholarships, commonly those awarded by colleges and universities, were held by 174 graduates (25.6%) and by 146 undergraduates (21.7%).

At both levels, fewer than one-third of the students had taken more than two courses in the neglected language which they were studying in Summer 1963. More than 6 courses each had been taken by a total of 75 graduates and 31 undergraduates. Columns 15 through 19 show these and other data on numbers of courses. In all tabulations of numbers of courses, an intensive (double-credit) course was counted as two courses.

Area studies courses (column 20) were taken by 63 (9.3%) of the graduates and by 14 (2.1%) of the undergraduates and linguistics courses (column 21) by 142 (20.8%) of the graduates and by 39 (5.8%) of the undergraduates.

Bilingual since childhood (column 22), or not native speakers of English, were 64 undergraduates (9.3%) and 80 graduates (11.8%).

One of the main purposes of the survey was to determine why students were learning each language. Columns 23 through 37 list the most frequent responses made by students to the request that they describe their reasons for study. Column 38 shows numbers of students in each language who had reasons other than those specified in cols. 23-37. The following chart shows the breakdown of undergraduate and graduate students:

	Undergraduate	Per Cent of 671	Graduate	Per Cent of 680

The largest single group of graduates are those planning to write or engage in research, though if all those who stated their intention to go into teaching (college, high school, or unspecified) are totalled, they are a slightly larger group. Among undergraduates, research and writing and general cultural interest (closely followed by 'travel') had the same number of persons in first place among reasons stated, though a much smaller proportion of undergraduates than graduates planned to do research. A total of 91 undergraduates planned to go into teaching of some sort. Among the reasons given by students in the "other" category above were the intention to become a translator, and the fulfillment of a language requirement.

ROSTERS OF STUDENTS

Two rosters of students are given: 1) by language and 2) by alphabetical order of names.

The symbol + appearing before a name indicates that the person is a student of more than one neglected language. Cross references are provided for each person so designated.

Following each name are references of year, of language (on Alphabetical Roster only), and of institution.

The numbers 63, 64, 65, etc., indicate that the person so designated is an undergraduate whose year of graduation is 1963, 1964, 1965, etc.

The ordinal numbers 1st, 2nd, 3rd, etc., indicate that the person so designated is a graduate student in the first, second, third, etc., year of graduate study.

The symbol -- in the year column means that the student did not indicate a year of graduation; or that he was an unclassified student (special student, etc.).

THE MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA
4 WASHINGTON PLACE
NEW YORK 3, N. Y.

MANPOWER IN THE NEGLECTED LANGUAGES, FALL 1962

PART X

EXTRACTS FROM THE ROSTER OF LINGUISTS

COMPILED BY

THE CENTER FOR APPLIED LINGUISTICS

The research reported here was performed
pursuant to Contract No. OE 2-14-032 with the U. S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

EXTRACTS FROM THE ROSTER OF LINGUISTS

The additional listings given here of persons with proficiencies in neglected languages were provided by the Modern Language Association Center for Applied Linguistics, Washington, D. C. The Center maintains a Roster of Linguists which includes persons with proficiencies in these and other languages regardless whether they are affiliated with an educational institution.

Each entry on pages 1-23 includes name and (where available) address and languages; for each language listed, type of competence is indicated by the following self-evaluation code:

0	native or near native command
1	fluent though obviously non-native in speech
2	adequate for general conversation
3	read difficult material easily
4	reading knowledge adequate for research
5	can lecture in language
6	translator or interpreter
7	have made linguistic analysis
8	have taught language

In the index by language, on pages 24 - 33, numbers refer to the names in the listings on pages 1 - 23.

MANPOWER IN THE NEGLECTED LANGUAGES, FALL 1962

PART XI

TEACHERS OF NEGLECTED LANGUAGES IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

The research reported here was performed
pursuant to Contract No. OE 2-14-032 with the U. S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Teachers of Neglected Languages in Secondary Schools

In connection with another survey of all foreign language enrollments in secondary schools in Fall 1962, the names of teachers of neglected languages were furnished by principals or other officials of secondary schools (public, independent and Catholic parochial).

According to the enrollments given by school officials, a total of 15 neglected languages were taught in secondary schools in Fall 1962. Public schools taught 11 languages: Arabic, Czech, Chinese, Modern Greek, Hawaiian, Hebrew, Japanese, Norwegian, Polish, Portuguese, and Swedish. Independent schools taught 7 languages: Arabic, Chinese, Hawaiian, Hebrew, Modern Greek, Japanese and Urdu. Catholic parochial schools taught 7 languages: Chinese, Modern Greek, Japanese, Lithuanian, Polish, Slovak, and Ukrainian.

Names of teachers were given by schools in all three categories. No names were given for teachers of Czech, Norwegian, or Swedish. The following schools reported enrollments in these languages: Rogers High School, Rogers, Texas (Czech); Lanesboro High School, Lanesboro, Minnesota, North High School, Minneapolis, Minnesota, and Roosevelt High School, Minneapolis, Minnesota (Norwegian); and South High School, Minneapolis, Minnesota (Swedish). Information on neglected language enrollments in secondary schools will appear in another MLA report prepared for the U. S. Office of Education, FOREIGN LANGUAGE OFFERINGS AND ENROLLMENTS IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS (Fall 1962), which will be available early in 1964.

On the accompanying list the following numbers of teachers in each language are given: Arabic 2, Chinese 69, Modern Greek 4, Hawaiian 4, Hebrew 71, Japanese 33, Lithuanian 6, Polish 33, Portuguese 3, Slovak 6, Ukrainian 11, Urdu 1. A total of 243 names are listed from the 3 categories of secondary schools (public, independent, and Catholic parochial).

Of the 243 persons whose names appear on the list, 120 teachers in 10 languages returned roster forms, which are on file at the MLA: (Arabic 2, Chinese 29, Hawaiian 3, Hebrew 26, Japanese 20, Lithuanian 4, Polish 24, Portuguese 3, Slovak 4, and Ukrainian 5). No teachers of Greek and Urdu returned forms.

Of the 120 teachers who responded to the questionnaire, 39 (32.5%) were between 30 and 40, 28 (23.4%) were in each of the ranges between 40 and 50 and between 50 and 60, 14 (11.7%) were younger than 30, 6 (5.0%) were over 60, and 5 (4.2%) did not give their age.

The title given by 76.6 per cent (92) was that of Teacher; 22 (18.4%) did not give any title and 6 persons (5.0%) specified a title other than Teacher. Three persons gave their titles as Chairman of the Foreign Language Department (one each in Arabic, Chinese, and Polish), two were school principals(1 teacher each of Lithuanian and Polish), and one person was head of the Science Department (Chinese).

Of the 120, 101 (84.2%) stated that they held a bachelor's degree (8 in the language they were teaching in Fall 1962, 93 in other subjects), 64 (53.3%) had a master's degree (18 in the language of instruction, 46 in other subjects), and 5 (4.2%) had a Ph. D. (2 in the language of instruction, 3 in other subjects). The two languages in which Ph. D. degrees were held are Hebrew and Ukrainian.

Degrees in other fields and the numbers of teachers who held each:

Bachelor's: Education (30), Social Studies (15), English (8), History (7), Philosophy (5), Theology (4), Economics, Mathematics, Music (3 each), Biology, Business, Literature, Spanish (2 each), Agriculture, Classics, Geology, Home Economics, Latin, Journalism, Romance Languages (1 each)

Master's: Education (15), Theology (6), History (4), Spanish (4), Philosophy and Social Studies (3 each), Journalism (2), Biology, English, Latin, Law, Literature, Political Science, Public Administration, Religion, Romance Languages (1 each).

Ph. D's: History (2), Education (1)

Seventy teachers (58.3%) stated that they had native or near-native speaking command of the language they were instructing in Fall 1962, and 38 (31.7%) were natives of the country whose language they were teaching. The largest number of foreign-born teachers were from Japan (15) and China (10).

Proficiencies were indicated by teachers in a total of 13 languages besides their language of instruction. The languages and the number of persons indicating proficiencies in them are: French 38, German 18, Spanish 14, Yiddish 14, Polish 13, Russian 9, Italian 4, Japanese 4, Portuguese 4, Arabic 1, Chinese 1, Czech 1, Tagalog 1.

The abbreviation HS for High School is used throughout on pages 1 through 5.

THE TEACHING OF CHINESE IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS: A REPORT OF CONFERENCES AND EVALUATIONS

The research reported here was performed
pursuant to Contract No. OE 2-14-032 with the U. S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

PART I

MLA Conference on Teaching of Chinese in Secondary Schools

The MLA, in conjunction with its survey of Manpower in the Neglected Languages, held a conference on the teaching of Chinese in secondary schools, 20-21 April 1963, in New York. Participants were: John Harmon (MLA) presiding, George Anderson (MLA), John De Francis (Seton Hall Univ.), Henry Fenn (Yale), Kai-yu Hsu (San Francisco State College), Frederick Jackson (Carnegie Foundation), Allan Low (Phillips Exeter Academy), Russell Maeth (Columbia), Stanley Spector (Washington Univ.), Gordon Thayer (Thayer Academy), Maurice Tseng (San Francisco State College), John B. Tsu (Seton Hall Univ.).

Chinese Programs at the Secondary Level

The Conference began with brief statistical resumes of information on teachers of Chinese in current secondary school programs and on students of Chinese in colleges and universities, with particular emphasis on the numbers who plan to go into teaching.

The first report covered the development of California secondary school Chinese programs, the first of which began six years ago. Four San Francisco Bay Area public schools started instruction in Chinese with the graduates of the summer institute for Secondary School Teachers of Chinese at San Francisco State College in 1961. In May 1962, the Carnegie Foundation awarded a grant to San Francisco State College to encourage Chinese instruction in high schools. With these forms of assistance, five more classes of Chinese began in the fall of 1962. Another class sponsored by the Carnegie Project at San Francisco State College began in the spring of 1963. All together, eleven Chinese classes are now being held in greater San Francisco and in Stockton, involving more than a dozen schools. Of these classes, six are sponsored by the Carnegie Project. All are accredited in the schools' regular curricula. The class average is about 15. Approximately 150 students are in these classes.

In St. Louis an experimental Chinese class of 20 students was given in summer 1962. The results were encouraging, so that a second-level class will be offered in summer 1963 to 15 students of the first class, who have been able to maintain their proficiency by using tapes during the winter. Another class will be offered to 20 beginning students. Chinese instruction in the Chicago area is still limited. The New Trier school in Evanston offers one small Chinese class.

In New Jersey there are 13 schools offering Chinese instruction, 233 secondary school students. In New York, there are eight schools offering instruction to 633 students. Included in New York figures are the schools in Chinatown. Many of the classes in New York and New Jersey receive some aid from a Carnegie Chinese Project at Seton Hall University. The quantity of programs in the metropolitan area seems to be sufficient and the main task appears to be consolidation and longer sequences of instruction.

Last summer over 30 high-school students from the greater Boston area completed an intensive course in Chinese language and area study. Another cycle of the program will begin in summer 1963. In addition, beginning fall 1963, three high schools in the Boston area will start regular Chinese classes by sharing the expenses of a teacher. An informal once-a-week class in Chinese language and culture is given at Phillips Exeter Academy with 32 students enrolled.

Teaching Materials

The Conference proceeded with a discussion of teaching materials available and with particular emphasis on those in preparation. The discussion was lively but because of the intricacy of details involved in the different materials, Mr. Maurice Tseng of San Francisco State College was delegated by the conference to describe the materials now in preparation and to draw up a priority list of materials still needed. Mr. Tseng's report is attached here as Appendix 1.

Prospects of Expansion

The Carnegie Foundation has given a grant to be administered by Stanford University which will provide funds to enable undergraduate students to spend one full year in Taiwan. Applicants must have had two years of college Chinese and candidates will be selected by a special inter-university committee chaired by Professor William Moulton of Princeton. To encourage the growth of Chinese programs in secondary schools the Foundation has given a grant to the University of Southern California for the development of Chinese and Japanese secondary school programs in the greater Los Angeles area. This program will be headed by Theodore Chen of the University of Southern California with the addition of two persons to his present program. It is expected that the St. Louis summer school program will continue in future years and will probably be supplemented by courses for high school students during the regular academic year. Thayer's summer center will have students from 27 different schools, about half and half, public and private. Following 9 weeks in the summer, students will attend 5 different centers and the teachers will move about. This program is still in the experimental stage and it is not certain how it can best be made permanent, through scholarship aid or through the use of teachers from the centers in the public high schools when they are not teaching at the centers. Many public schools in the Boston area are aware of the importance of Chinese and it is hoped that they will express an active interest in obtaining teachers on a regular (though not necessarily full-time at any one school) basis. In the Chicago area, which is likely to become a new center of interest in Chinese, Evanston and New Trier have made beginnings to combine forces in Japanese and Chinese which will be offered intensively in summer school in 1964.

Teacher Training

Mr. Maurice Tseng of San Francisco State College gave a detailed description of the various types of training programs for teachers of Chinese that are available to in-service and pre-service teachers. His presentation included the regular teacher-training program in Chinese at San Francisco State College under the auspices of the FL Department but stressed the summer Institute sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education and the in-service training program supported with Carnegie funds during the academic year, which complements the summer program. He emphasized the teacher's command of Chinese and his familiarity with methods of teaching. Several teachers sponsored by the Carnegie Chinese Project at San Francisco State College continue to receive in-service instruction in Chinese while teaching at a high school. The theoretical discussion and practice-teaching carried out during the summer training program are applied and tested in the actual classroom activity of these teachers.

Mr. Tseng described the background of the teachers and observed that though native speakers of Chinese are still available as teachers, the principal task of teacher-training programs is to cultivate talented young teachers through the regular teacher-preparation channel. Native speakers, however eager they may be to teach Chinese, face many technical and academic difficulties, which stem from the lack of training as teachers of the language. As associate director of the San Francisco State College Carnegie Chinese Project, he commented on the various difficulties involved in getting a Chinese program started and continued in any public school as a part of its formal, accredited curriculum.

Mr. John Tsu of Seton Hall reported that most of the fifteen schools with Chinese instruction in New Jersey have competent teachers who have received help from the training facilities at Seton Hall. Among applicants for next summer's training program at Seton Hall, a number appeared to be clearly underprepared. This points up a very serious problem: the shortage of potential teachers with adequate language preparation. There are, Mr. Tsu also observed, not enough colleges and universities in the Eastern states which devote serious attention to the preparation of teachers of Chinese at the secondary level. Most of the graduates of summer programs at Seton Hall so far are teaching Chinese regularly at several schools. His experience led him to urge that any future teacher-training programs in Chinese should stress language discipline and should make provision for in-service refresher-courses at regular intervals.

Mr. Tsu and Mr. Tseng stated that in terms of teacher demand the numbers of persons currently engaged are adequate. Both emphasized the need for improving the quality of training. Mr. Tseng emphasized that after 1965, in view of the prospects of expansion of Chinese programs in California, many more teachers would be needed.

Testing

Mr. Henry Fenn of Yale observed that so far there have not been any adequate tests developed in the Chinese field for general use. The Carroll-Ho battery, he said, is a good basis for further developments into useful instruments of measurement. There is still a clear need for a satisfactory standardized test for spoken Chinese. He called attention also to the tests in preparation by Harriet Mills of Cornell for intermediate-level reading comprehension designed to measure the cumulative effect of 2 years' study.

He described the series of aptitude tests which he and his colleagues at the Institute of Far Eastern Languages at Yale experimented with for screening applicants. These tests include devices for checking the candidate's ability to grasp the fundamental linguistic structural principles and to measure ability to perceive differences and similarities between Chinese and English grammar. These tests are entirely in English. Mr. Fenn's experience in using these tests indicated that they have a relatively high validity, but he is not certain of their general applicability.

Summer School in Taiwan

Mr. Gordon Thayer of Thayer Academy reported on a special summer program to be held this year in Taiwan. One of the purposes of this program is to compare the results of the Thayer summer program with the one abroad. Five students (2 boys, 3 girls) have been selected to attend a six-week session at the Taipei Language Institute. Mr. Allan Low of Phillips Exeter Academy will accompany the students as coordinator of the program. The schedule will include 24 hours a week of classes with two full-time instructors, supplemented by two special lectures, three tours, two formal Chinese meals a week, and Chinese operas, movies, and instruction in Chinese art. Weekend trips are also planned and at the end of six weeks the group will go to Hong Kong for two weeks. The students will go to Taiwan with a speaking vocabulary of 1500 words and a writing vocabulary of 1200 words. The goal of instruction is to bring them to the level of 2100 to 2400 speaking vocabulary and 1800 to 2000 writing.

On the Spot Evaluations of Current Programs

The final item of discussion was the list of criteria to be used by visitors to current programs for evaluating instruction and learning in secondary schools. The participants discussed the criteria prepared by a team under the direction of Prof. Joseph K. Yamagiwa for evaluating summer programs in neglected languages in summer of 1962 at the university level. A number of changes and additions were suggested for incorporation into a list prepared by Prof. Stanley Spector and used during the visits. A report of the visits to secondary school programs follows here as Part II.

PART II

A SURVEY OF SECONDARY-SCHOOL LEVEL CHINESE LANGUAGE PROGRAMS 1963

I. Introduction

This report on Chinese-language programs in school at the secondary level in mainland United States is based on a survey undertaken during the late Spring and Summer of 1962 by Kai-Yu Hsu of San Francisco State College, John B. Tsu of Seton Hall University, and Stanley Spector, of Washington University. The schools surveyed represented a wide variety of public and private secondary schools; the programs visited likewise differed considerably in various respects. But the common element was that all were bringing secondary-school students into some contact with the Chinese language. In some cases classes were "regular" and conferred academic credit within the secondary-school program. In other cases they were "non-credit" courses; in a few they were supplementary to the regular curriculum; and in a few instances they were supplementary summer programs. The requisite for recognition by the evaluating committee was that the program be: 1) offered in a secondary school, 2) offered by a teacher chosen and selected by a constituted school authority; 3) organized, directed, or at least under the purview of competent academic authorities and professionals in the field of Chinese language instruction. A teacher trained at one of the professional institutes for the training of Chinese teachers carrying on a program remote from a large Chinese academic center would be considered competent to organize and present such a "recognized" course.

The programs visited include:

BOSTON AREA: The Thayer Academy Program, with its centers at Braintree, Concord, Andover, Exeter, and Wellesley.

NEW YORK-NEW JERSEY AREA: Horace Mann High School, New York Chinese Public School, Seward Park High School, Parsippany High School, Williamstown High School, New York Military Academy.

MIDWEST AREA: Mark Twain Summer Institute, St. Louis.

WESTERN AREA: Bonneville High School, Ogden, Utah; Edison High School, Stockton, California; Westmore High School, Daly City, California; Cubberley High School, Palo Alto, California; Palo Alto High School, Palo Alto, California; Sequoia High School, Redwood City, California; Lincoln High School, San Francisco, Galileo High School, San Francisco.

Several schools which had appeared on the original schedule of visits by the survey teams had temporarily discontinued their Chinese programs, but the committee noted information on their experiences for inclusion in this report. The committee set about the survey with several questions in mind, which tend to fall into two categories: 1) questions relating to the introduction and maintaining of Chinese language programs at the secondary-school level, and 2) questions relating to the means of carrying these programs forward successfully. The wide variety of programs and experiences witnessed by the survey teams provides a rich basis for comparison and further research and testing. At the same time, the variation in conditions, objectives, and practices makes it difficult to present hard and fast rules or generalizations. The development of Chinese language programs in the secondary schools has proceeded from several sources ranging from the initiative of unassisted teachers on the local scene to projects developed at university centers with the support of the Office of Education and/or the Carnegie Corporation. At the same time the pioneers in a field which a decade ago would have been considered impossibly remote have all in common been aided by the efforts of the Modern Language Association as well as the Carnegie Corporation and the Office of Education, which have made possible the closest liaison among major institutions in various parts of the country and have encouraged the fullest discussion of major issues, wide experimentation, and continued teamwork from the very beginning.

The aim of this report is to make available the collective experience to date in the teaching of the Chinese language at the secondary level, to bring into sharper focus some of the problems most frequently encountered and most in need of early solution, to make tentative and preliminary recommendations for those engaged in the development of secondary-school programs in Chinese, and to suggest several steps which might lead to immediate favorable development in the nation. The still inconclusive evidence of this initial survey only points up the need for continued observation and research, as well as for continued discussion of immediate and long-range objectives in the field.

For the successes which were noted, most of the credit must go to the individual teachers who, standing usually quite alone in their school systems, have had the courage and patience to promote a field often considered too unreal or esoteric for serious attention. The teacher of Chinese rarely has colleagues with whom to compare experiences, and he has the double task of explaining a field while teaching it. But in every school where Chinese is taught there are also administrators with the foresight and wide vision necessary to implement what was once a dream and is now a vital national program. To these teachers and administrators our team members express their admiration. Further, since it was these same hardworking instructors and administrators who had to submit to the questioning of our survey teams, who arrived with little notice, and with formidable briefcases and recording instruments, our deep gratitude accompanies our wishes for their continued and greater success.

II. How Much Chinese and to Whom?

The very nature of the American secondary school as an institution which provides terminal as well as intermediate education, (which may be public and open to all regardless of capacity or motivation as well as private and with strict entrace requirements), makes it difficult to render general prescriptions. Since the survey embraced all types of schools and programs, however, its conclusions take into account the complexities and ambiguities of secondary-school systems.

1. Chinese as a course in the regular secondary-school curriculum. The survey committee was unanimous in the belief that Chinese should be taught as extensively and seriously as any major language in the world. When taught, Chinese courses should be offered during regular school hours, carrying academic credit, and by regularly accredited teachers. The work of developing Chinese instruction, contrary to what some people may believe, is not merely to meet an emergency --- that is, it is not primarily to be considered as part of a national defense program. It is a subject worthy to be taught effectively and permanently in American public schools. Such teaching should be integrated within the high-school program. The ultimate goal in teaching Chinese, as in teaching any other language, should involve the student in the total culture represented by the language.

a. Integrating Chinese into the regular curriculum. The public must be informed of the need for Chinese programs, and be persuaded to support their inception. School administrators must be made aware of the need to support relatively smaller classes, a necessity at the inception of new language programs. School systems must try to develop a sustained sequence in Chinese leading directly to the college level.

b. Teacher supply for a regular secondary school Chinese program. While the present number of Chinese teachers is small, their professional interest and seriousness of purpose can match those of teachers in any other field. Good teaching, above all, is an art. In order to cultivate this art, efforts must be made to recruit linguistically talented and professionally dedicated young undergraduates to start their professional training in Chinese instruction early enough to ensure a sufficiently long period of training. Summer-intensive programs are an important aid in this direction. In-service teacher-training programs must be developed and expanded for the same purpose. Promising students and in-service teachers must have scholarship opportunities to enable them to receive such necessary long and short-term training.

2. Chinese as a course for specially selected schools and students. The unanimous opinion that Chinese should be taught generally in the secondary schools is modified by experience and belief among some observers and teachers, to the extent that, as in many of the sciences and other technical and difficult fields, certain conditions should exist before Chinese is offered: Students should be linguistically talented and highly motivated, and they should have an opportunity to continue Chinese studies at the collegiate level.

a. Selection of students. Three of the institutions observed had carefully selected the students to whom Chinese was offered. They were private schools with students of superior ability, and the Chinese courses were offered in addition to the regular curriculum, at after school hours and/or accompanied by intensive summer programs. The selection bases varied, but all involved in one form or another the use of I.Q. and Achievement Scores, academic records, and in many cases language aptitude tests. The recruitment of students also involved questionnaires or interviews; in short, a rigorous weeding process.

b. Future prospects in the use of Chinese. The institutions which used selective recruitment processes were schools whose graduates moved directly into college. The majority of their students of Chinese intend to continue their study of Chinese at college; many have already been accepted into major collegiate programs.

c. Summer Courses. The experience of observers of intensive summer courses is that students perform remarkably under the advantageous conditions obtainable on that basis. Students at the institutions observed compared favorably with average college students. Moreover, the majority of these students planned to go on to colleges where Chinese is offered.

d. Implications of the "Special Chinese Courses". The implications are highly controversial. On the one hand there is little doubt that highly selected students in high prestige private institutions, studying on an "extra-curricular" basis, and reenforced with intensive summer programs learn more Chinese than the average student in a regular high-school course. Further, the probability of their successful continuance of Chinese is far greater. However, the regular programs may well be of far more long-range significance, since only such programs can reach the rank-and-file of educated Americans. To continue to treat Chinese as a specialty only serves to make it a specialty.

e. Selection of teachers for the "Special Chinese Courses". The courses at the three private institutions had the advantage of relative ease in the recruitment of teachers. As private institutions they were not bound to have certified teachers. Hence they could turn to universities and language institutes in recruiting teachers. Furthermore, such teachers, unlike regular secondary-school teachers, did not have to be, and in fact were not qualified to teach anything else than Chinese. Further, all such teachers were qualified to teach at the college level.

The problem of teacher recruitment, then, suggests that by limiting the teaching of secondary-school Chinese to selected institutions, preferably close to large University centers where a regular source of instructors is available, the problems involved in the creation of a large body of Chinese teachers for the secondary schools can be avoided. Obviously this is only an avoidance, and not a solution for the real problem, which is how to develop competent teachers of Chinese within the corps of regular secondary-school teachers, who in addition to Chinese must show competence in education and other subjects in order to be certified.

III. What Kind of Chinese to Teach?

It is generally agreed that the only Chinese that should be offered in the secondary schools is the National Language, otherwise called Mandarin, or Kuo Yü. Even the teachers in the various schools in the Chinatowns, which are predominantly Cantonese-speaking, accept the National Language in principle and increasingly in practice.

Several of the schools observed in the California and New York area were attended primarily by Chinese-American students. It should be noted in passing that although many of them are superficially familiar with Chinese culture, and have an affinity for the written language (which is universal in China), the spoken National Language is for them a foreign language.

The question of what kind of Chinese to teach is related very much to the question of objectives. In recent years the discussion as to the relative importance of the written or spoken Chinese language has been considerably aired. This controversy is usually resolved with a statement that both are equally important, and that the only question is which should be taught first, and, perhaps, most. Chinese is by no means the only language for which this question has been raised; indeed it is one of the last. The reason for this is obvious. Up to recently Chinese has been taught in only a few collegiate centers, where it has been of concern mainly to Sinologues concentrating on the traditional culture, for whom mastery of the Classics was sufficient. As Chinese becomes of interest to a wider circle of scholars first, and of laymen later, the demand for a better knowledge of the modern spoken as well as written language has developed. As we move into the secondary schools, the question becomes impelling.

It is generally agreed that Chinese should be studied primarily by students intending to go on to college, and that the purpose of a secondary-school program in Chinese is to give the students a sufficient grasp of the language so that they can move forward at a brisk and productive rate in college. Further, it is expected that they should be able to make good use of their Chinese while at college: that is, carry on a moderate amount of elementary research involving Chinese books, newspapers, and periodicals, and communicate in Chinese with instructors, fellow students, and visitors; and further to be able to take advantage of lectures, films, recordings, and dramatic presentations in Chinese.

In order to accomplish these goals at the college level (goals rarely achieved up to now even at the graduate and post-graduate level), it would be necessary to start Chinese as early as possible in the school career, and certainly during the secondary-school training period. The survey committee on the basis of its experience agrees that a four-year high-school program leading to a true college-level program is desirable. There is some question as to whether it is possible at this stage, and if not, what should be the amount and levels taught.

Objectives and levels achieved differed widely in the various schools and school systems observed. How can a true comparison be made between, for instance, a six-week intensive summer course, and a two-year daily regular sequence involving fifty minutes per day? Minimum standards are yet to be discussed and published. Obviously the publication of textbooks helps establish these standards.

1. The Case for Spoken Chinese. It has been strongly and eloquently stated and there is no need to review it here. The only question involved is the extent to which secondary schools should concentrate on spoken Chinese. There are advantages in a heavy emphasis on spoken Chinese. It provides necessary basis for later comprehension of written Chinese and for great familiarity with sentence and thought patterns. It places very little reliance on home study, since it is learned in class and in language laboratory. It is relatively easy to learn, and the average student can make good progress. It is very amenable to the social conditions of the modern classroom, since it involves group study and participation.

2. Disadvantages of Over-emphasis on the Spoken Language. While essential for learning sentence structure, it is of relatively less help in learning characters (and character-learning is the most obvious and greatest stumbling block for most American students). Most schools observed had inadequate language-laboratory facilities, and students questioned stated that they received very little benefit from such facilities as existed. Most classes had no opportunity to practice Chinese outside the classroom. Spoken Chinese, not reinforced by reading, is quickly forgotten. Chinese is not a popular language in America, and students will find little opportunity to make use of knowledge of spoken Chinese. There is a shortage of native instructors who can teach an accurate spoken Chinese. Spoken Chinese tends to relapse or disappear when written Chinese is introduced intensively.

3. The Case for Written Chinese. Most students will use written Chinese for several years in college before they have any real opportunity to speak Chinese. Very few colleges can offer regular lecture courses in Chinese, but courses can easily require research and reading assignments using Chinese. The written character is one of the great cultural achievements of China and is fascinating in its own right. Students press hard to study characters. It can be studied after class and with great sense of daily achievement. Reading gives intellectual satisfaction.

¶4. Disadvantages in Too Early or Too Much Emphasis on Written Chinese. It is relatively difficult to learn and it involves tedious memorization. It is extremely time-consuming. There is relatively little reading material available. It requires a large vocabulary (perhaps 2000 characters and twice as many expressions) before relatively simple materials (newspapers and popular periodicals) can be read.

Placing the various arguments side by side, it is apparent that what must be achieved is a reasonable balance of effort and attention. Modern linguistic technique calls for the achievement of a good standard of spoken language before the undertaking of reading and writing. How long should such preparation take and what should be achieved? The answers to a large extent must depend upon the length of projected sequences in Chinese. In school systems which feel that two years of Chinese is all that can be offered, obviously most of the time will have to be spent on reading. If a four-year sequence is anticipated, it should be possible to spend a long initial period on mastery of spoken Chinese.

If Chinese is to be offered at the freshman level in secondary school, a relatively long initial period of Chinese without the written characters can be allowed. If secondary students in their junior and senior years are studying Chinese with a view to advance placement in college programs, they will want to achieve a definite standard of literacy. Perhaps it seems unwarranted to state the question in either-or terms. But comparison of the existing programs leads to the conclusion that with relatively few exceptions stress had been placed on one or the other aspect, and strength in one led to comparative weakness in the other.

Perhaps the most encouraging observation has been that regardless of what the teacher intended for emphasis, a highly selected class of students with a good teacher who is willing to use Chinese continually in class, and use Chinese so far as is practical as the medium of instruction, achieves excellent results in both fields of Chinese--written and spoken. However, such teachers were relatively rare, and such classes few.

This is not to say that the standards in general were not good. Certainly the survey team had great cause for general satisfaction with what was observed. But it was also clear that for the most part classes tended one way or the other, and a satisfactory balance has to date not generally been achieved.

Better than average students who are kept too long solely at spoken Chinese soon find it to be tedious and unstimulating. Only the most skillful teacher can maintain general interest and enthusiasm while drilling the slower or less interested students in sentence patterns, correcting tones, and demanding seemingly endless repetitions of simple phrases. Admittedly this is how most of us learn to speak our native languages: but we do so at early ages and in living situations--not in the artificial atmosphere of the classroom.

It has been the general experience of the teachers in every program that the students are anxious to learn to read characters and to use them at the earliest opportunity, and they constantly press teachers to introduce the written language earlier than may be judicious. On the other hand it is also a very general experience that with the introduction of characters certain bad tendencies develop. Students break up sentences and phrases unnaturally, tending to rely on the eye rather than the ear for comprehension.

Under optimum conditions, with highly skilled teachers, small classes, well selected students, and adequate access to language laboratories (or in the case of one institution, where each student was furnished with a tape recorder to keep at home) the above disadvantages can be avoided and one can move ahead smoothly on both fronts. Unfortunately most institutions visited had insufficient provision for use of language laboratories and insufficient time in general allotted for the study of Chinese.

IV. Standards of Achievement

One difficulty in determining the standards to be expected of secondary-school programs in quantitative terms is the uncertainty of existing standards at the higher level. Levels of achievement vary greatly from college to college, and the survey team looks forward to the publication of criteria involved in college-level standards, inasmuch as it is these levels which must determine what has to be done at the secondary level. Meanwhile the consensus was that, depending upon the school and the intensity of the program, a high-school year should be the equivalent of a half-year or a full-year non-intensive college course.

In fact, students at one institution who completed a one-summer intensive course followed by 4 hours a week in winter were found qualified to enter intermediate intensive summer courses at major university centers. Thus some secondary-school programs are prepared to equal or go beyond college-level courses year for year. But such programs were for the elite students; there is serious question whether such levels of achievement are possible or, for the moment, even desirable for the average public high school.

It was noted that it is easier to judge standards of achievements at institutions using older and more familiar text-books, especially where reading and writing are stressed, since translation and written work and mastery of Chinese characters can easily be tested and compared. It is far more difficult to evaluate aural comprehension and oral expression, but the survey team endeavored, nevertheless, to note impressions and make rough comparisons.

Achievement seemed closely related, among other things, to class size and motivation. Relatively lower achievement was noted in large classes where difficulty in maintaining discipline was experienced. These experiences, moreover, seemed more closely related to the cultural and socio-economic status of the student body than to the ability of the teacher. In general small, highly selected classes have no discipline problems whatsoever, with notable results in terms of achievement, which equal college levels. Motivation was another important factor. Students with no expectation of continuing Chinese in college or students who were taking Chinese merely to satisfy credit requirements made relatively little progress. Thus at one institution a first-year Chinese class virtually overtook a second-year class, largely, according to the teacher, because the seniors did not care what happened so long as they graduated. An excellent device for raising achievement levels in spoken Chinese was the Chinese Speech Contest in the San Francisco area, which brought into friendly competition students from all of the schools engaged in the Chinese language program.

V. Books and Other Written Materials

A relatively narrow range of materials are presently being used in the secondary-school programs. Inasmuch as selections of materials were made by teachers for many different reasons, it will be helpful to list some of the determinants as suggested by teachers.

1. Materials developed specifically for high schools; teachers trained to use such materials; aid and supervision rendered by material-producing center. Such materials were selected because they were produced for the secondary classes; units corresponded with the school-program requirements; teachers had something very definite and applicable upon which to rely; teachers shown how to use the materials. Provided confidence and criteria.

2. Standard college-level sequence and text-books. Teachers could know entire sequence in advance. Familiar with materials since they had used them previously.

Tapes and other aids readily available in advance.

3. Materials under preparation while the course develops. Teacher constructed course on theoretical basis and in accordance with linguistic experience at other institutions. Can test and revise on basis of experience with small elite class. The material-producer shares class with drill instructor.

The principal works in use today are: 1) The Yale Institute of Far Eastern Languages Series, including Speak Chinese, Read Chinese, Chinese Dialogues, Lady in the Painting; 2) San Francisco State Chinese Language Course for Secondary Schools; 3) Columbia Carnegie Chinese Language Project materials being developed by R.Maoth; 4) Teng Ssu-yü's Conversational Chinese; 5) Chao Yuan-ren's Chinese Primer (supplementary use only).

In addition, Seton Hall University has made great progress in its production of materials for secondary-school courses, but these are not yet in general use.

It was of interest to note that in every case but one the teachers were satisfied with the materials being used. There were indications, however, that considerably more could be done with the Yale materials if supplementary materials could be provided in order to: 1) increase the number of vocabulary items more rapidly; 2) increase the number of common utterances; 3) provide more drill and practice. Teachers employing the San Francisco State College materials were generally quite satisfied, too, and looked forward to gaining more experience using them in the future.

On the basis of its own survey and the reports of the teachers themselves the survey team came to the conclusion that there is an urgent need for a secondary school level Chinese-English, English-Chinese dictionary using either the Yale system of romanization or the p'ing-yin system. Whichever system is used, a conversion table to the other should be printed on the inside front or back covers of the dictionary. The dictionary should be hard-bound, suitable for use in large school systems.

Another recommendation, made by a teacher, and deemed most worthwhile by the Committee, was that Chinese text-books should be in hard-binding. Most books in current use were designed for institutes and colleges where students buy their own books. Books used in public school systems must have greater durability than most present texts possess.

It is also felt that there is a great need for the production and publication of narratives, poems and perhaps songs in Chinese suitable for use at the secondary level. Such materials should be prepared on a cooperative basis, and it would be well to have members of the Committees that are studying secondary-school developments brought into consultation in order to ascertain the most general standards at which to aim in such material production.

VI. Tapes and Other Audio-Visual Aids

Every existing textbook is now accompanied by tapes and records. The problem is less of having the books on tapes than in the development of tapes and other audio-visual helps which can be used effectively within the limited time periods provided for the students. In this respect there is at present wide variation in the type and quality of available tapes. In the comprehensive systems the tapes are used for reenforcement and response. In some systems assignments are made on the tapes. But in other series, notably those of the Yale Institute, the material calls only upon passive skills of the listener or single repetition after the model.

In addition, there is either too little tape material (per lesson) or too much (in time). The problem here is largely a result of the differences in the situations at specialized institutes or colleges and in the average public secondary school. At institutes and colleges it is assumed that the student will have several hours a week to use tapes in the language laboratories. In college the student has only a few classes a day, and plans his own daily work schedule. But in the secondary schools, even where language labs/are freely available (and this is rare), students are working within rigorously scheduled programs and rarely have freedom to use a language laboratory for more than one period a week. Materials which are mere repetitions of textbooks, or rapid fire utterances alone, cannot be used to best advantage under these conditions.

There is great need for a careful survey of all existing taped materials and for an evaluation of such materials, as well as for specific recommendations as to the types best suited for various types of secondary-school programs. This may well involve the production of new series of tapes to meet the new conditions arising from the teaching of Chinese in the high schools.

Very few materials other than tapes were in use. The survey team found no use of film strips; and it is recommended that such be prepared in the near future.

The majority of teachers are too busy to prepare supplementary materials, and although some attempt to produce charts, tapes, etc., it should be kept in mind that secondary-school teachers have far less time--and are allowed far less opportunity to specialize--than college teachers. Such materials must be prepared for the teachers and must correspond to the materials being used in the classrooms and be arranged in units small enough for convenient use within the high-school time schedules. Such materials must be progressive and must be closely coordinated with the textbooks. This is no easy task, but it is essential if Chinese is to be made practicable for general introduction into the secondary-school systems.

VII. Language Laboratories

The language laboratory situation is still very uneven. Some schools have excellent facilities which are made readily available to the Chinese classes. Other schools have no laboratories. Possession of a language laboratory, however, is no guarantee that it will be used. Some teachers have found that the fuss and bother involved in bringing a class into the laboratory and setting up the tapes for the individual students is excessive. With an average of only 15 minutes a day allotted to use of the laboratory, the total time getting back and forth was too great. Hence several teachers preferred to bring a tape recorder into class. This was found to be effective where classes were small.

The use of portable units in one school made it possible for a single teacher to "teach" three classes of Chinese simultaneously. This solved the problem of a shortage of Chinese teachers in the school, perhaps, but it constitutes another hazard in the use of language laboratories. Several teachers were not aware of what is meant by "programmed tapes or programmed laboratory materials." The laboratory was not seen as a teaching mechanism, but rather as a chance for students to hear a Chinese voice and practice tones. There was no general type of practice throughout the schools surveyed. Those under the supervision of San Francisco State College, which provides progressive programmed materials, seemed to make best use of language laboratories when they were available.

Private schools tended to rely upon furnishing students with recorders or encouraging them to furnish their own instruments. This enabled one school to require twenty-two minutes of unsupervised practice with tapes daily. This was considered to be as satisfactory as bringing the students into a laboratory. Obviously this solution cannot be extended to the general public school at this stage.

A few rules would seem to be worth noting at this point: 1) Language laboratories should be employed for purposes of reenforcement, correction, and for widening the student's experience with sentence patterns. The student should be kept active and responsive. 2) Laboratories should be as simple as possible to operate. Too often the scheduled period is over before the students have wound their tapes to the desired lesson. 3) Schools should schedule laboratory use in two ways: a) for classroom laboratory sessions; b) for study during "free" or "study periods." 4) A laboratory is only as good as the taped materials employed (see section on Tapes above).

Since the opportunities students have to hear spoken Chinese are extremely limited in most sections of the country, it is important that schools have mechanical devices to enable students to hear Chinese spoken frequently and by a wide variety of speakers. The laboratory is the only means whereby large numbers of students can have ample practice. The larger the classes, the more urgent is the need for proper language-laboratory facilities.

VIII. Motivational Activities

All the programs surveyed took into account the great importance of supplementary activities which would help sustain the interest of students in Chinese studies and at the same time broaden their acquaintance with Chinese culture. Almost every teacher had taken it upon himself to arrange a series of activities toward this end. Creating language clubs and planning special events are standard practices in secondary schools. Indeed, in this respect the secondary schools are far ahead of many colleges. In every area visited, but particularly where the large secondary-school Chinese programs exist, a fairly rich program of such extra-curricular activities was offered. In the San Francisco area, in addition to an annual Speech Contest, there were frequent showings of Chinese films, as well as occasional song-fests, "Chinese Nights", lectures, and other features which met with enthusiastic response. In the New York area, the students were taken for tours of Chinatown, had Chinese dinners, and had the opportunity to meet Chinese speakers, hear lecturers, and see dramatic performances. Summer Institutes also provided rich motivational activities. One institution undertook to teach each student a Chinese craft; had frequent Chinese dinners, and introduced the students to the secrets of Chinese cooking. Famous artists and lecturers appeared before the students, providing an excellent introduction to Chinese culture as well as experiences of great inspiration.

Such discrepancies as existed among the programs were due to 1) the physical location of the school and community; 2) the program load of the teachers; 3) the availability of resources, which usually must be provided from major Chinese instructional centers; 4) the schedule of the school.

There can be no doubt that these activities increase the students' understanding of the language and culture, and stimulate them to further study. They also are valuable demonstrations to the school community and the public at large of the vitality of Chinese culture and of the indirect cultural benefits to be derived from the existence of Chinese language programs. Speech contests and plays in particular provided great motivation for the raising of standards in the use of Chinese.

The teaching of such subjects as calligraphy as an extra activity (since most classes have little time for calligraphy in the regular program) served to round out several programs in a very commendable way.

Several recommendations are offered with a view to making resources more widely available generally, and in order to bring to a higher level the excellent activities observed at the local schools: 1. A national committee on Chinese language programs for the secondary schools should provide such services as lists of films, schedules of dramatic and musical performances, lectures and demonstrations, and arrangement of tours in order to ensure that participating schools will have opportunities to include such attractions in their local programs. 2. Such a committee should attempt to arrange the filming of suitable subjects for use by the schools. 3. A monthly newspaper in Chinese, graded for various levels, in romanization (for elementary classes) and Chinese characters should be published and distributed. It is suggested that each of the major centers take responsibility for the production of two issues a year. 4. At the earliest opportunity a summer camp for students of Chinese should be established. Such a camp, meeting for eight weeks, would bring together outstanding students and teachers for an intensive Chinese summer program in language and in the humanities and fine arts relating to China. 5. The Chinese Speech Contest now held in the Bay area should be extended to the whole country. 6. Local centers should have students prepare taped programs for distribution to other centers. Students would thus communicate with one another in a novel way. Or a Chinese "Tape Pal" club could be inaugurated on a national level. Students would be pledged to communicate only in Chinese. This activity would be supervised by local teachers with the advice and assistance of a national committee.

IX. Integration of Chinese Language Programs within the General School Program

To date most of the secondary-school programs have been "hot-house" growths, planted in the schools and supported by outside grants. Wherever such outside support pays for the expenses of the course and provides a fraction of the teachers' salaries there is no problem. The problems arise as the programs attempt to become self-sustaining. Chinese is still too new and too remote from the experience of the average administrator, not to mention the average community, to be accepted easily as a normal part of the curriculum. The problem is partly one of time, and the survey team is convinced that the successes of the programs to date go a long way toward solving this problem in several areas. The integration of Chinese will take place only as questions such as the recruitment of teachers, competent in Chinese and certified to teach, and sufficiency of student enrollment are solved. Further, as more and more colleges accept Chinese for entrance credits, and offer Chinese courses for those who have already started, the high schools will be encouraged to continue and expand present Chinese programs, and to introduce them where they do not yet exist.

The most important step at this juncture is to ensure the existence and continuance of a Committee on Secondary School Chinese programs, representing the various geographic areas of the country and the various types of schools and programs. This Committee must continue firmly the start already made through continual interchanges of information, frequent meetings, complete cooperation, division and assignment of tasks, and through the acquiring of a vast body of information and experience to be freely placed at the disposal of those interested in bringing Chinese into the school systems. It is the responsibility of such a committee to familiarize itself thoroughly with the needs of schools, administrators, and teachers, and to make recommendations regularly. For the time being Chinese must be actively promoted as a worthwhile subject, and the need for the fullest coordination is greatest at this time. Wasteful duplication of effort should be avoided; premature fixing of specific patterns must be avoided. At present we need the kind of data which only widescale experimentation, carefully controlled in order to assure that students and teachers are not thereby victimized, and a wide variety of experiences can produce.

Meanwhile we must be alert to the fact that subsidization of Chinese programs from outside the schools, while temporarily absolutely necessary in many cases, must give way to sound, economical programs, and that this transition should be a primary objective from the first.

Integration of the programs must also depend largely on the teachers themselves. The extent to which they educate their colleagues and supervisors and the degree to which they participate fully in other school activities will help determine how soon Chinese will find a comfortable and secure place in their schools.

It should be a source of reassurance to school administrations and school boards that from the first the majority of Chinese programs have been conducted under the most careful academic supervision, with ready help from major college, institute, and university centers, and that at all times there has been insistence that the standards maintained for Chinese language classes be at least equal to those in any other language. High standards and successful graduates are the best assurance that Chinese will remain in our secondary schools as a basic discipline and subject of serious study.

X. Conclusions

The following conclusions, offered primarily for purposes of detailed discussion, may also serve as guidelines for future planning based on our experience with secondary-school Chinese programs to date:

A. Objectives

1. Chinese should be taught as a regular language at the secondary school level, either in a three or four year sequence or in a sequence of two or three intensive summer courses plus two full years. 2. Wherever possible, Chinese should yield regular language credit; it should also be acceptable for advanced placement at colleges on a par with other languages. 3. The student completing a secondary-school sequence should be prepared to take upper-division college Chinese-literature courses where discussion in the classroom is largely in Chinese, and where materials studied are mostly in Chinese. He should be able to begin writing reports in Chinese. a) Social-science students should be brought to a level where they can use modern Chinese literature relevant to the social sciences, and be prepared to do field work involving Chinese following their junior year at college. They should be able to handle Chinese with sufficient fluency to benefit from Junior Year Abroad programs in Chinese-speaking areas. b) All students should be able to speak Chinese to teachers and fellow students and read letters and newspapers in Chinese. c) All students should have, through the study of a sufficient amount and level of modern Chinese, a sound background for the study of Classical Chinese. 4. It is not desirable at this time to state criteria in terms of numbers of characters or utterances to be mastered owing to wide discrepancies in intensity of programs, recruitment patterns, and above all, in the college criteria now existing. a) a general ratio of two years of high-school Chinese to one year of college Chinese is considered to be reasonable. b) In intensive secondary programs (which include summer courses) a ratio of one year of secondary-school Chinese to one year of college Chinese is reasonably to be expected.
5. In the average program it is expected that emphasis will initially be placed on the following order of skills: a) understanding; b) speaking; c) reading;

d) writing. After two years emphasis would be shifted to reading and writing skills, although conversation would continue to play a large role in classroom activity. Reading and writing should be taught and learned through the use of spoken Chinese as the medium of communication. a. It is recognized that programs intensively preparing students for entrance to college courses after one or two summers and one year of Chinese at the secondary level would place relatively more weight on reading skills. b. The underlying assumption in stressing aural-oral approaches is that the student will study enough Chinese to enable him to use these skills in reading. If students are not to learn enough Chinese to enable them to read everyday Chinese there is some question as to the value of their learning to speak. Hence the early emphasis on spoken Chinese should not be misunderstood as a primary goal. It is primary only in sequence, not in ultimate importance.

B. Selection and Certification of Teachers

Six types of teachers were observed. It is suggested that they may be conveniently categorized as follows:

A 1 - American, born and raised in America, educated solely or primarily in America.
A 2 - American, born and raised in America, educated in China for substantial time.
A 3 - American, born and raised in China and educated in China for substantial time.

C 1 - Chinese, born and educated in China, with substantial use of Mandarin.
C 2 - Chinese, born and educated in China, with substantial use of Mandarin, and also educated in America.
C 3 - Chinese origin, born or raised from childhood in America, and educated in America.

1. The most numerous category of teachers in the secondary-school systems at present is C 1 (Chinese born in China and educated mostly in China). There are also several C 3's. Most of the A 1's observed had spent one or two years in China, but did not speak with true fluency. All of the A's had been trained at language institutes for the teaching of Chinese. The great advantage of C 1 and C 2 teachers is their ease in conducting classes entirely in Chinese. However, it appears that many yield to student pressure to use English. While several teachers did outstanding jobs in teaching Chinese using virtually only Chinese, it is felt that a great deal more Chinese could be used with advantage by the Chinese instructors. 2. Several C 1 and C 2 teachers seemed to doubt that students could profit from hearing only Chinese. They felt that the students would be lost. The only way to convince such teachers would be to arrange for them to visit classes where this is done, and have them observe the salutary results of conducting classes at the beginning almost entirely in Chinese and subsequently entirely in Chinese. 3. Several of the Americans attempted to use a great deal of Chinese in class. In fact, Americans tended to greater use of Chinese than the Chinese teachers. The limitations in their Chinese are obvious to natives, but for the students they were setting good examples. The conclusion is encouraging: there is a real place for American teachers in the Chinese language programs, even though they have marked deficiencies in accent and use. These can be corrected through availability of advanced study courses in the summer, and through overseas opportunities. 4. It is desirable that teachers in public secondary schools be certified and have regular status, but it is recognized that for some time to come special arrangements may be necessary since C 1 and C 2 teachers do not have the required courses. This lack does not in any way detract from their suitability as teachers, but it presents administrative problems. Meanwhile it is important that certifying agencies understand the scope of this problem. 5. Means should be found a) to give non-Chinese teachers more and better training in Chinese; b) to give Chinese teachers better grounding in linguistics; and c) to assist non-certified teachers to take the courses necessary for qualification. 6. A useful device is to use teaching teams consisting of a certified, trained American teacher with a substantial knowledge of Chinese and a native Chinese speaker. This is an expensive method, but some study should be given to ways of making it more economical, since, in addition to providing an excellent pedagogical approach, it may help solve temporary certification problems. 7. Support should be given to increased activity and continuance of existing institutes for training secondary-school teachers in Chinese. 8. Wide publicity and appeals must be made to teacher-training colleges to provide candidates for the study of Chinese. Schools of Education at other colleges and universities should be made aware of the developing field of Chinese language studies and should channel outstanding students into Chinese programs at their respective schools. 9. Secondary-school teachers should be encouraged to attend meetings of the Modern Language Association, and provision should be made for special meetings and for the exchange of information among them. 10. Provision should be made for Chinese and American teachers to visit each others' classes to overcome the particular feelings of inadequacy which both groups expressed frequently to the survey team. 11. A training film for teachers of Chinese should be prepared soon. This film should include demonstrations using all the important current texts and sequences.

C. Students

Although the general objective is to introduce Chinese as a regular part of the secondary-school curriculum, in view of the problems still faced, it is recommended that, where it is feasible and will not hinder development of classes, some criteria be established for the selection of students to study Chinese. It must be emphasized that this is only a temporary expedient; it should not be attempted where it may jeopardize programs already successfully under way. 1. Students electing Chinese should be discouraged from taking it unless they show a clear determination to study Chinese for a minimum of three years (either entirely in school, or in school and college). 2. Students should be selected from the top half of their classes. 3. While indications of language aptitude are desirable, the present status of aptitude tests in general, and the distance of Chinese from Indo-European languages, should caution us not to reject good students solely on the basis of poor performance in such tests. 4. It has not been ascertained that previous study of a foreign language should be a prerequisite for the study of Chinese. While it is true that highly selected students who had studied other languages performed outstandingly, it is not clear whether this was because of general aptitude ability and motivation, or transfer. Students questioned gave no indication that previous language study had been helpful in Chinese. 5. While in some cases it is helpful from a "political" point of view to require the study of other languages before allowing a student to study Chinese (since it dispels some of the jealousy that teachers of Chinese frequently encounter), in other cases the setting of burdensome prerequisites will reduce the number of eligible students challenged by the prospect of something new and different. The requiring of "standard" languages before allowing a student to take Chinese also has the disadvantage of placing Chinese in an inferior or else "peculiar" status. At worst, it seems to warn that Chinese is too difficult for the uninitiated to approach. This is exactly what should be avoided, inasmuch as Chinese is no more difficult than any other language learned properly and thoroughly. 6. Since one must master a great deal of Chinese to make any worthwhile application, and since the tonal nature of the language requires intense drill, students should be selected partly on the basis of ability to concentrate, do hard work, and perservere. These are prerequisites for study in any field, but they are especially important for secondary -school classes in Chinese. A few lackadaisical students can ruin a class and gradually wear down a teacher. Such students should at this stage at least be rigorously excluded from Chinese classes if they can be detected in advance. 7. At all costs teachers and administrators should avoid having Chinese classes become a dumping ground. Students electing Chinese should be warned that standards will be rigorous, and that no allowance will be made because Chinese is "unusual." 8. Students who successfully complete two years of Chinese, or one year and a summer, should be given opportunities for participation in college summer institutes and programs abroad. (If a Chinese summer camp is organized, the best should be selected to attend.) Encouragement should take the form of scholarships. The excellent start made by the Thayer Academy in instituting a summer in Taiwan should be noted. Efforts should be made to expand that program, and to initiate similar ones. A summer institute for secondary-school students at the University of Hawaii would be one excellent means of bridging communications between students and teachers on the mainland and Hawaii on the one hand, and of giving students experience in an area with at least a flavor of Asian culture. A national committee should consider these and similar means of encouraging students. 9. The development of a crop of secondary-school graduates competent in Chinese implies that the colleges and universities must be prepared to receive them, place them at proper levels, and take responsibility to see that they have opportunities for further progress. It is recommended that a Committee charged with the responsibility for development of secondary-school programs meet with the representatives of the college programs from time to time to ensure the continued progress of students.

D. Class Size

1. A class of from eight to ten is the ideal size for elementary Chinese instruction. 2. It is recognized that schools establish minimal numbers which vary from locality to locality, and it would be unrealistic to make any recommendation. However, it is suggested that teachers utilize laboratories to make possible occasional meetings with smaller groups of students for intensive practice in conversation.

E. Frequency of Meetings

The objective in an ordinary high school is to have daily Chinese classes. In view of the need for laboratory drill, an additional two hours a week should be allowed for laboratory study.

F. Instructional Materials

1. The four sets of materials now in use or being prepared should be tested for some time before new sets are developed. 2. It is desirable at this time to develop materials to supplement existing texts and sequences. A questionnaire should be submitted to teachers of Chinese annually, allowing them sufficient time for careful responses, requesting their detailed comments and suggestions. 3. There is need of additional tapes, film strips, and a great deal of reading material (as distinguished from texts). Simple plays suitable for classes on various levels should be made available. 4. There is immediate need for a reference grammar of Chinese written in language comprehensible to the average teacher (both Chinese and English), with examples and illustrations. 5. There is need for a dictionary of Mandarin Chinese for the secondary schools. Such a dictionary should employ either the Yale or p'ing-yin system and include a conversion table to the other system. 6. Chinese texts should conform with standards used for other high-school text books with respect to print, binding, etc. 7. Complete lists of available materials and those in preparation should be made available to all secondary-school Chinese language teachers, together with descriptions of the sequences, objectives, availability of supplementary materials, tapes, etc. 8. Teachers should be encouraged to make use of language laboratories judiciously, and they should support development of such laboratories at their schools.

G. Motivation and Extra-CurricularActivities

1. There is need for greater national coordination, in order to make more opportunities available in all communities. 2. A student Chinese newspaper should be developed. 3. A national secondary-level Chinese summer camp (perhaps at Hawaii) should be considered. 4. Career opportunities through Chinese language should be described in a brochure issued by a national committee.

H. Status of Secondary-School Chinese Language Programs

The survey team is satisfied that remarkable results have been obtained generally in the teaching of Chinese to secondary-school students. For the most part standards are easily equal to those obtaining in colleges a decade ago. The best secondary school programs today equal or exceed those in the average college both in level of achievement and in terms of quantity of material covered. All the evidence seems to indicate that secondary-school students respond exceedingly well to Chinese and that they have less difficulty than older students in accepting Chinese sound pattern and structures.

The principal problems in the field relate to its newness: teacher shortages, problems of teacher certification, minimum class sizes required in some communities, possibilities for students to continue Chinese in college, opposition of faculty members in some areas, general unfamiliarity with Chinese culture and literature.

The outstanding needs of the moment would seem to be: 1. Continued support to existing programs. 2. Assurances of permanence of Chinese teacher-training institutes, or arrangements to assure otherwise a flow of Chinese teachers in the years ahead. 3. At least one decade of maximum financial support from outside sources, to help pay fractional salaries, teacher training costs, scholarships for teachers and students, development of materials, possible summer camp, study abroad. 4. The continuance of the present committee, or creation of a new committee to coordinate activities, supervise standards, and carry out generally such recommendations in this report as are deemed worthy of adoption.

PART III

Second MLA Conference on Teaching of Chinese in Secondary Schools

The MLA held a second conference on the teaching of Chinese in secondary schools, in San Francisco on 11-13 October 1963. Participants were: George Anderson (MLA), John N. Bruscemi (Williamstown High School, New Jersey), Shau-wing Chan (Stanford Univ.), Leo Chen (San Francisco State College), Theodore Chen (Univ. of Southern California), Harry L. Chin (Edison Sr. High School, Calif.), Juliet S. Choi (Hawaii), Henry C. Fenn (MLA), John T. Harmon (MLA), John L. Hawken (Fresno High School, Calif.), Beatrice Y. Hee (Hawaii), Kai-yu Hsu (San Francisco State College, Evaluator), Frederick H. Jackson (The Carnegie Corporation, New York), Gary Lee (Seward Park High School, New York), Robert Lemen (Mark Twain Summer Institute, St. Louis, Mo.), Philip A. Lum (Lincoln High School, San Francisco), Eileen Marron (MLA), Norman Nathan (Muir High School, Pasadena, Calif.), Everette O'Rourke (California State Department of Education), Lily Shang (Thayer Academy, Braintree, Mass.), John T. Simpson (Sequoia High School, Redwood City, Calif.), Stanley Spector (Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., Conference Chairman, Evaluator), Laura Sung (Palo Alto High School, Calif.), Maurice Tseng (San Francisco State College), John B. Tsu (Seton Hall University, South Orange, N. J., Evaluator), Helen F. Wong (Galileo High School, San Francisco), Wilbur Woo (Starr King Annex, San Francisco), Pei-yi Wu (Columbia University, New York), Henry Yang (San Francisco State College), Timothy Yang (Westmoor High School, Daly City, Calif.).

The purpose of the conference was to bring together from widespread geographical areas and from both public and private schools as many secondary school teachers of Chinese as possible in order that they might share their experiences and problems, and learn of possible solutions which their colleagues had devised. Further, the conference hoped to set up the machinery for continuing discussions among secondary school teachers in the future. Both these objectives were accomplished.

Parts I and II of this report were distributed to the conferees prior to the meeting. Part II served as the point of departure for much of the discussion.

Visits to Schools in the San Francisco Area

On Friday morning, 11 October, conferees who had arrived from out of town were invited to visit schools in the area. Classes at three schools were visited: Westmoor High School, Daly City; Sequoia High School, Redwood City; and Palo Alto High School, Palo Alto. The visits established a rapport among the teachers and brought to attention many points which were discussed in the formal conference sessions.

Administrative Problems

It was the consensus of the conference that insofar as the administrative problems in the introduction of Chinese into the secondary school curricula were concerned, the overwhelming need was for publicity about programs already in existence, the potential availability of teachers for new programs, and the national need for speakers of Chinese. To combat the need for publicity, special stress was placed on the recommended preparation of an information packet concerning secondary school Chinese programs, to be distributed to State Foreign Language Supervisors, and to the national organizations of parents, counselors, and superintendents. The Counselor's Guide distributed by the U. S. Office of Education should serve as a model for the packet. The conference requested the Chinese Language Information Center of the Modern Language Association to approach the national organizations, to provide them with descriptive materials concerning the teaching of Chinese, and to seek from them a statement of support. It was also recommended that a small brochure, attractively designed to highlight information on current Chinese programs and their valuable contributions, should be prepared for as wide circulation as budget would permit. Such a brochure should also include information on how new programs may be established.

The main administrative problem in sustaining programs already begun is lack of enrollment and the financial problems resulting from small numbers of students. It was pointed out that where only one or two classes of Chinese were formed in a school, the teacher for these classes must also have competence and accreditation in another subject matter field. Moreover, it is necessary to meet the rigid state quotas for class size.

One solution to the problems above is to have several schools share one specialist teacher, thus having each school contribute to a single salary; or to have students from several schools combine into a single class. The thought underlying all the discussions of problems in sustaining programs was the necessity for planning a complete sequence in Chinese courses at the outset of the program, and to provide well-qualified teachers for each course. Experience has shown that many administrative problems are circumvented when a firmly established faculty member with Chinese language competence initiates a Chinese teaching program.

Teachers

The conference emphasized the prerequisites for persons teaching Chinese in secondary schools as: 1) state accreditation and 2) language competency. In addition, he must be able to handle freely all his course materials. He must be familiar with classroom techniques and he must have training in the methodology of language teaching. The conference endorsed the seven-point teacher qualification statement prepared by the Foreign Language Program of the Modern Language Association in 1959. Special provision should be made for certifying the Chinese specialist, and the conference suggested that the idea of "team teaching" be explored in cases where a Chinese language specialist without state certification might be teamed with an accredited teacher.

How Much Chinese and to Whom?

The opinion of the conference was that whatever Chinese is taught at the secondary level, it should be part of a well-articulated sequence ranging from elementary school through college. The emphasis on all beginning courses should be on the spoken language. Regardless of the length of the sequence it was felt that the highest level should be offered in the twelfth grade to provide continuity at the college level. The following attainments in the various language skills were accepted by the conference as the standard of a 4-year sequence, based on periods of 40-50 minutes per day, 5 days a week for the full school year:

Type of Material	Per Cent of Total Time	Content
Grade 9
Audio-lingual	85	300 morphemes; 750 vocabulary items; basic dialogues; pronunciation
Reading	5	160 characters; recitations; dialogues; songs and other edited materials
Grammar	5	word functions; 14 basic sentence patterns
Writing	5	sentence making; sentence series
Grade 10
Audio-lingual	75	300 (600)* morphemes; 600 (1,350) vocabulary items; dialogues; conversation; intonation
Reading	15	250 (410) characters; edited stories
Grammar	5	sentence pattern variations; idioms
Writing	5	composition, 150 words; accounts of daily life
Grade 11
Audio-lingual	65	300 (900) morphemes; 400 (1,750) vocabulary items; story telling; topical discussion
Reading	20	300 (710) characters; selected and prepared news stories; selected and prepared essays on Chinese culture
Grammar	5	common styles of writing
Writing	10	composition, 100 (250) words; essays on given themes
Grade 12
Audio-lingual	50	300 (1,200) morphemes; 300 (2,050) vocabulary items; speech; plays; debates
Reading	30	300 (1,010) characters; selected and prepared news stories
Grammar	5	common stylistics and rhetoric in modern Chinese;
Writing	15	composition,100 (350) words; essays

* All items in parentheses are cumulative totals.

It is understood that while the quantitative statements in this sequence refer to active control of the language, a student's passive knowledge of the language may well exceed these figures.

Proportionate variations of the chart on the preceding page will depend upon the individual school systems. Additional sequences for grades 6-12, 7-12, and 8-12 are given in the reprint from California Schools, XXXIII, No. 9, September, 1962.

The conference stressed that the first sentence of the last paragraph on page 4, PART II of this report which reads, "It is generally agreed that Chinese should be studied primarily by students intending to go on to college,..." should be interpreted to mean that Chinese classes should be open to every student who seriously desires to take the course and that where there are more students than the class can accommodate, preference should be given to students who show promise of being able to complete the entire sequence offered.

Materials

The main criticisms of existing materials were that conversion tables from one romanization system to another often were not provided, that too few supplementary materials were available, and that some books have appeared only in soft cover. It was pointed out that some public school systems do not allow the purchase of any but hard cover books. The conference was generally agreed that the beginning level basic texts now available and in progress are presently sufficient and that effort in producing new materials should be placed on other needs, most important of which are included in the Priority List of Needs appearing in Appendix 1.

Proposals for a Continuing Organization of Secondary School Teachers of Chinese

The conference ended with a resolution, adopted by all present, that plans be made for future meetings of secondary school teachers of Chinese, and that there be a permanent unit of teachers at the secondary level. A committee was formed to investigate the possibility of establishing a secondary-school advisory committee to the Chinese Language Teachers Association (CLTA) which will be formed in December, at the annual meeting of the Modern Language Association in Chicago. All teachers were urged to apply individually for membership in the CLTA. The present committee voted by the conference consists of five members: John Bruscemi, New Jersey, Chairman; Harry Chin, California; Beatrice Y. Hee, Hawaii; Lily Shang, Massachusetts; and Richard Yang, Missouri. The committee will work closely with the Chinese Language Information Center of MLA in defining common needs and in seeking solutions to the problems shared by all teachers of Chinese in secondary schools.

APPENDICES

APPENDIX 1

A. Priority List of Needs: Materials to be Developed for Use in Secondary Schools

BASIC REFERENCE MATERIAL

Student Dictionary
Handbook of Chinese Sentence Structures
Basic Vocabulary Lists

SUPPLEMENTARY GRADED READING MATERIAL

Stories, Plays

TESTING

Small number of Model Tapes, designed to measure the speech competencies in both pronunciation and fluency at different stages of language learning.

SUPPLEMENTARY AUDIO-VISUAL MATERIALS

Adaptation of Tapes now available to secondary school courses
Teaching Films, Filmstrips
Charts, Maps

For all printed materials using romanization, it is assumed that conversion tables to other romanization systems should be given on the inside covers.

Many of the materials listed above are also needed at the college level. It is possible that a single graded reader, for example, could be written to answer the need in colleges and in secondary schools.

B. Descriptions of Materials in Progress and of Materials Published in Tentative Form, Suitable for Use in Teaching Chinese in Secondary Schools:

1. Columbia University, Basic Chinese (provisional title) by Russell Maeth and Roger I. P. Yeu. Now in ditto form, earliest publication date is 1965. Yale romanization and characters. Vocabulary of 1500 syntactic words. Object: to present Mandarin phonology, "core grammar," and sufficient examples of use both to illustrate and allow for oral communication in a variety of situations. Approx. 260 pp., containing 40 units, to be taught in 180 hours plus 105 summer hours. Recordings.

   Accompanying this text will be Basic Written Chinese I, also in 40 units presenting new combinations of patterns and words previously learned. This will be followed by Basic Written Chinese II, planned in 35 units, emphasizing the written word, with supplementary oral materials.

   Additionally, Introduction to the Chinese Writing System (now 35 pp. in ditto) is being expanded and will probably be issued as a separate volume; and A Contrastive Study of American and Mandarin Speech Sounds is being prepared by Maeth and Miss Chih-ping Chang.

2. San Francisco State College, Chinese Mandarin Level I by Kai-yu Hsu, John Liao, and Henry Yang. Now in mimeo form, publication expected in 1964. Yale romanization and characters. Vocabulary of 750 items, 160 characters. Object: audio-lingual training of basic spoken Chinese and the presentation of all the most important basic structures. Designed as a first-level one-year course in secondary school, most suitable for the 9th grade. The set of materials for the teacher will be about 550 pages, for students about 150 pages. Two sets of recordings, one for the teacher, containing nearly everything in the text; the other for the student, designed for laboratory use or for study at home, programmed into small units of about 10 minutes each. To be taught in 150 hours.

   Levels II - IV are being developed.

3. Seton Hall University, Intermediate Chinese by John De Francis. Now in ditto form, publication expected in 1964. Pinyin romanization. Vocabulary of 650 items. Designed for full school-year use on the intermediate level of secondary school, to follow Beginning Chinese by the same author. Object: audio-lingual training. Accompanied by recordings taped from natural conversations. About 720 pages.

   Advanced Chinese, also by De Francis, designed for the third year of secondary school, is expected to be available early in 1965 in ditto form, and published later the same year. About 700 pages.

   Additionally, Chinese Character Reader I (1964), II (1965), and III (1966) are being planned for use on the first, second, and third levels of secondary school. Each book will contain about 600 pages, and will present about 400 characters. Accompanied by recordings, and designed for use in conjunction with the conversational texts described above.

   (Chinese for Elementary School by Mrs. Yeh-nan and John B. Tsu is available now in ditto form. Books I, II, and III contain about 300 pages each, and 300 vocabulary items each. Audio-lingual approach. Pinyin. Recordings. Designed to precede the De Francis materials described above. Publication of the volumes is expected in 1964 (I), 1965 (II), and 1966 (III).)

4. Yale University, Various texts. Yale romanization. All have appeared in multilith form, and are awaiting revisions and final publication. Dates given refer to appearance of tentative editions.

   Materials designed to accompany or extend Speak Chinese by M. G. Tewksbury, which has already been published:

   Henry C. Fenn, Chinese Sentence Structure, Review Exercises, 31 pp., 1962. Review of sentence patterns. Structures are grouped topically and intended as a basis for discussion of problems in translation. May also be used independently of any specific textbook.

   Fang-yu Wang, Speak Chinese, Translation Exercises, 60 pp., 1962. Exercises from English to Chinese to be prepared in writing for later classroom clinic.

Composite authorship, Speak Chinese, Supplementary Materials, 151 pp., 1962. Drill materials to be used for student preparation and for a classroom directed by the teacher.

Composite authorship, Speak Chinese, Teacher's Handbook, 108 pp., 1962. Romanization plus limited characters.

Other materials in tentative form:

Yu-ju Chih, Primer of Newspaper Chinese, Supplement, viii + 42 pp., 1961. Characters with romanization in vocabularies. Level of 1,000 characters pre-requisite. Selections from Chinese newspapers (additional to those in his Primer of Newspaper Chinese, which was published in 1956).

Charles J. Chu, Campus Talks, 49 pp., 1959. A series of dialogues introducing the vocabulary and usage of Chinese students on a college campus, for use as a third level text in spoken Mandarin. Dialogue, vocabulary, questions, translation exercises from English to Chinese.

____________, Chi Bai Shr, His Life and Work, Part I, 88 pp., 1961. A reader (to be read in 3-4 hours) prepared within the range of the first 600 characters (to accompany Read Chinese, Book II by Richard I. Chang, the latest printing of which was in 1962).

Daisy Kwoh, Topical Conversation, 214 pp., 1962. Eighteen vocabularies on current topics of everyday life, for use as a conversation base, at a level between intermediate and advanced. Vocabulary of 3850 items (1750 main items, 2100 sub-items).

Fang-yu Wang, Chinese Dialogues in Characters, 153 pp., 1961. A character transcription of the spoken-language text, Chinese Dialogues (which was published in 1953). Produced as an intermediate reader at the 1,000-character level.

__________, Flashcards. Set of 300 Chinese characters (to accompany his Read Chinese, Book I, which was published in 1961).
